FBI directs search for James Earl Ray

Tennessee's prison chief told reporters Powell offered no resistance as he was taken into custody while walking down the road near the entrance to the Frozen Head State Park about 8 miles northeast of the penitentiary.

He said Powell apparently had been sighted first by a heliocoper.

Officials said earlier they believed the six convicts had split into two or more groups are were "pretty much going around in circles" in the heavily forested Cumberland Mountains of East Tennessee.

Powell was returned immediately to the penitentiary in a state police car past a gathering of reporters and cameramen into the compound.

The search continued for Ray and the other four. A tennis shoe print belonging to one of the escapees provided authorities with their most tangible clue to date.

"This time of year, someone who knows how to live in the woods could make out very well," said Tennessee Corrections Commissioner C. Murray Henderson, adding there are berries to eat. "They could hide out for 10 days and not move."

Henderson virtually ruled out the possibility that Ray, the convicted slayer of Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., had outside help in the spectacular Friday night escape from Brushy Mountain State Prison. The men bolted over a wall on a makeshift ladder as other prisoners created diversions in the yard.

As helicopters equipped with infrared sensors and fresh teams of tracking dogs were brought in, more than 150 searchers concentrated on the thickly forested hills above the forbidding prison.

Residents of the area were alerted by telephone that the fugitives were at large, but there were no reports of break-ins.

In the nearby town of Petros residents were reported mostly staying home and keeping firearms close at hand for protection.

Mabel Farmer, an elderly woman who has lived in Petros for 19 years, said prison breaks are "just one of those things when you've been here as long as I have."

In Washington, the FBI announced Saturday that it had taken over the search and had placed Ray on its list of 10 Most Wanted Fugitives. All six fugitives were charged with conspiring to violate a 1946 federal law against flight to avoid confinement.

The White House said Atty. Gen. Griffin Bell telephoned President Carter on Saturday morning to give him a progress report on the search.

Charles Bass, assistant corrections commissioner, said the search area was expanded from five square miles to 10 square miles late in the morning after officials found a tennis shoe print. He said the print most likely was made by Larry Hacker, whom he described as the probable leader of the escape.

Henderson said the escapees, four of them convicted murderers, were "pretty much going around in circles," as he said other escaped prisoners have done in the heavily forested area.

Bass said there were strong indications the fugitives split into at least two groups. The search was focused on two areas known as "Frozen Head, a promontory 10 miles from Brushy Mountain, and another area called "Twin Forks."

He said authorities thought the men had split up because of the way the dogs were reacting to the scents they were following.

"Now that they're in daylight, they are a little better oriented than they were before ... But they are still not sure where they are."

Henderson said, "As far as we can determine, there are at least thee in this general area."

He also disclosed that three of the men were seen by a guard "at a distance" an hour after they went over the wall with a makeshift ladder just before dusk.

"They picked up the scent of three, then one or two," Henderson said. "Apparently they dimided and are going in different directions."

The only paved road leading from the prison was sealed off in several places by police roadblocks intended to keep the curious out of the area and the escapees in.

A seventh felon was wounded and recaptured almost immediately after the escape.

Henderson said the man, Jerry W. Ward, a convicted bank robber serving 20 to 40 years, refused to talk about the escape.

"I don't think they had any outside help," Henderson told reporters clustered at the prison gates. "We had no evidence to indicate there was any outside help at all."

John Downs of INCON Inc., a Nashville firm which supplied the infrared devices for the helicopters at the request of the FBI, said the camera-like machines were extremely sensitive to temperature variations on the forest floor.

"If you get it focused and in range, you actualy get a picture," he said, "a thermal image." To be effective, however, operation of the machine must be closely coordinated with the pilot. Moreover the heat of the sun prevents its use between early morning and evening. Downs said the sensors are normally used to detect home heat loss.

The manhunters' ranks swelled to more than 150 with the arrival of five vanloads of specially trained state police SWAT teams. A huge communications van also was brought in because the telephone system at the prison went out, perhaps coincidentally, when the escape took place.

In addition to Ray, the fugitives were:

Earl Hill Jr., serving two life terms for first-dgree murder, rape and assault with intent to murder;

Larry E. Hacker, serving 28 years for robbery that included a death;

David Lee Howell, serving 100 years for first-degree murder;

Douglas Shelton, serving 68 years for felonious assault and first-degree murder.

Ward, who was hit with one shotgun pellet and one rifle slug, was serving 20 to 40 years for bank robbery.

Ray and the others scrambled over the wall as prisoners in several areas of the yard created disturbances apparently intended to divert attention. One prisoner walked too close to the wall. Two others feigned a fight. Another pretended his ankle was broken.

But Henderson said no one in the prison would talk.

"We are dealing for the most part with hard-core prisoners, maximum security prisoners, who live by an inmate code," he said. "They aren't going to tell anybody anything."

VA health program obsolete, report says

WASHINGTON (AP) — The multibillion dollar Veterans Administration health care program is obsolete and costly and should be phased into the country's general health system, says a major National Academy of Sciences report.

The extensive three-year study, commissioned by Congress and released Saturday, said the health system for military veterans generally gives adequate care, but is riddled with problems.

The report said there could be significant improvements in cost and quality of care if VA policies were revised "to permit the VA system ultimately to be phased into the general delivery of health service in communities across the country."

The VA, veterans groups and others reacted immediately and negatively to the suggestion that the autonomous VA hospital system be done away with, as they have in the past to similar recommendations.

VA Administrator Max Cleland said: "I can personally attest to the fact that the VA hospital system has many areas where improvements can be made. However, any suggestion for elimination of the VA hospital system is contrary to the nation's history of providing for veteran health care."

Sen. Alan Cranston, D+Calif., chairman of the Senate Veterans Affairs Committee, called the report "thoughtful and serious" and said he would hold hearings on it in the fall.

However, Cranston said, "I remain fully committed to maintaining a separate VA medical system that can guarantee quality care for the disabled veteran."

R. D. "Bulldog" Smith, national commander in chief of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, termed the report "insulting and

Following the shooting, McMikle said the woman had attempted to run to a nearby grocery store, but had collapsed on the road. Menzie reportedly fled on foot into a wooded area, but was apprehended by sheriff's officers about 12:45 p.m.

The weapon allegedly used in the shooting has been recovered, according to McMikle, who said an autopsy had been performed on the woman's body by Dr. Robert C. Ahlvin at Missouri Delta Community Hospital in Sikeston for removal of the bullet for identification purposes.

She was born July 13, 1947 in Forest City, Ark. and had been living in Mississippi County since 1950.

Miner man accidentally shoots self

NEW MADRID— A Miner man, Loise Simmons, 38, of Alsup Trailer Court, apparently accidentally shot himself Saturday when he went to the home of his daughter, Joy E. Simmons at Parma, where he had allegedly threatened to kill her and her fiance Gary Cagle, who were to be married Saturday night.

Simmons is in New Madrid County Jail, suspected of exhibiting a dangerous and deadly weapon in a threatening manner in the presence of his daughter.

The daughter told police officers that Simmons was in his car in the driveway at her house between 7 and 7:30 a.m. when he allegedly pointed a .22 caliber revolver at her head and threatened to kill her and Cagle. She reportedly went back inside the house and Simmons' sister, Louise Simmons, went out to the car to talk to her brother.

Simmons left in his car and was stopped on Highway 153 for speeding by a highway patrol officer, who saw that he was hurt and told him to go on the the hospital in Sikeston.

Simmons was treated and released at Missouri Delta Community Hospital in Sikeston and was arrested at the hospital by Trooper George W. Harris of the highway patrol, who transported him to New Madrid County jail.

Paul Joe Bollinger, 18 or Annapolis, was seriously injured in a one-car accident at 3:15 a.m. Saturday on Route K, two miles west of Annapolis.

The patrol said a car driven west by Bollinger went out of control in a curve, ran off the right side of the road, then went across the road and struck a tree.

Bollinger , who was taken to Arcadia Valley Hospital at Pilot Knob, was cited for careless and imprudent dricing by excessive speed.

An accident at 7:40 a.m. Friday on Route 105, one mile south of Charleston, caused minor injuries to a Charleston woman.

The accident occurred when a farm tractor, pulling a trailer driven south by Larry Rogers, 26, of Charleston, was making a left turn into a private drive as a car driven south by Paula Pruett, 30, of Charleston was passing. The Pruett car struck the rear of the trailer. The Pruett woman was taken to Missouri Delta Community Hospital in Sikeston.

Two persons received minor injuries in a car-station wagon collision at 1:05 p.m. Friday at the junction of Routes 51 and K at Kinder.

A car driven west by John Hosentfeld, 73, of Advance Route Two failed to yield the right-of-way and turned into the path of a stationwagon driven north by Wendell Scanlon, 71, of Venedy, Ill. Both drivers received minor injuries. Scanlon was taken to Doctors Hospital in Poplar Bluff and Hosentfeld was taken to Lucy Lee Hospital in Poplar Bluff.

Hosentfeld was cited for careless and imprudent driving by failure to yield.

At 1:40 a.m. Friday, on Route 62, one mile east of Malden, a truck-car collision caused minor injuries to a Lilbourn woman.

The patrol said a southbound truck driven by Leman Forrest Samples, 43, of Malden attempted to make a left turn and was struck in the rear by a car driven west by Shirley Ann Atchley, 33, of Lilbourn. The woman was taken to Dunklin County Memorial Hospital in Kennett for treatment of minor injuries.

Two persons were injured in a single-vehicle accident at 1:40 a.m. Saturday on a gravel road, four miles west of Doniphan.

Jonathan Wesley Benton, 18, of Doniphan Route Six, traveling west in a flatbed truck at a high rate of speed, lost control of the truck that ran off the road and struck a tree.

Benton sustained moderate injuries and a passenger, Valerie Marrow, 16, or Doniphan suffered minor injuries. It was not reported where the injured were taken for treatment.

Jimmy Wayne Calvert, 14, of Clarkton, a pedestrian, suffered moderate injuries when he was struck by a car at 11 a.m. Saturday on Highway 25 at the north edge of Clarkton in Dunklin County.

Kids at heart

Preparing refreshments daily for over 100 children at a week-long Vacation Bible School might be tiresome to some, but Mrs. Bertha Thompson, at left, and Mrs. Bess Welshans, 90 and 83 respectively, found it very rewarding. The two, who completed their annual service at the New Madrid Baptist Church Bible school Friday, rode the church bus with the children to and from the school.

SMSU to offer grad courses in chemistry

CAPE GIRARDEAU— You wouldn't know it by looking at the summer schedule of graduate offerings, but Southeast Missouri State University will offer two graduate courses in chemistry during the regular session, June 13-July 29.

The two courses, Fundamentals of Organic Chemistry and Basic Concepts of Inorganic and Physical Chemistry, were accidently left off the summer schudule, said Dr. R. E. Popham, chairman of the Department of Chemistry at Southeast Missouri State.

Fundamentals of Organic Chemistry will meet at 9:30 a.m. Monday through Friday and will be taught by Dr. Bjorn Olesen. Basic Concepts of Inorganic and Physical Chemistry will meet at 8 a.m. Monday through Friday. The professor will be Dr. Mike Readnour.

Prerequisites for either course are two semesters of general chemistry. Each course is for three semester hours of credit.

"These two courses," Dr. Popham said, "have been especially helpful for those in other sciences who have been asked to fill in as chemistry teachers. Others have found these courses helpful in keeping up with the increased amount of chemistry finding its way into high school textbooks in other areas of science, biology in particular.

Today's news in brief

Interested in phantom rates

COLUMBIA, Mo. (AP) — A member of the newly appointed commission to investigate premium rates on fire and homeowners' insurance policies in Missouri says he is interested in "phantom rate increases."

Brays is a professor of finance at the University of Missouri, and he is among 17 members appointed Friday by Gov. Joseph P. Teasdale to study insurance rates in the state and the mechanics by which they are established.

Brays says the phantom rate increase is achieved by rewording a policy so the amount of coverage or the perils covered are reduced. The effect, he said, is that the policy holder gets less insurance for the same amount of money.

Brays said he had not been advised when the commission will hold its first meeting but he understands the governor is expecting a report from it by November 1.

Carter appeals to public

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter is appealing to the public to pressure Congress to counterbalance pressure from the oil and auto lobbies which he blames for setbacks for his energy plan.

"Unless the American people speak up, the special interests are going to prevail," Carter said in an interview made public Saturday.

Carter said it was "very disturbing" to see congressional panels "begin to chip away at individual component parts" of his energy plan.

"There has to be compensatory interest and pressure from the general public in a constructive fashion on members of Congress demanding strong action to counterbalance the intensely focused and highly visible pressure that is put on the members of Congress by special interest lobbyists here on a daily, hourly basis..." the President said in the interview, which was conducted Friday with members of the Magazine Publishers Association.

"Unless the American public can be aroused to help me and others who believe that this is extremely important and (unless) ...the American public is willing to accept some sacrifice if it is fair, I am afraid that we are not going to have an adequate program when it is over."

Carter vowed to "go more and more public" in his expressions of criticism or support for congressional actions on his energy proposals. Meanwhile, a key congressional leader said Congress will rewrite Carter's energy program to accomplish through tough new laws what the President seeks to do with taxes and rebates.

Rosalynn rates trip success

CARACAS, Venezuela (AP) — Rosalynn Carter, nearing the end of a two-week Latin American good-will tour, said Saturday she made the trip "because I really think it can be helpful to Jimmy," and she rated the tour a success.

Mrs. Carter spoke at a press conference that was delayed when she suffered a slight attack of nausea. The illness forced her to leave a morning meeting with the wife of Venezuela's president and social workers and to miss a scheduled meeting with union officials.

The First Lady was given a nausea pill by her nurse, rested for 45 minutes and then resumed her schedule.

At the press conference, Mrs. Carter was asked if she felt uncomfortable about the feminist aspect of her diplomatic mission.

"I have not been uncomfortable at all," she said. "If it hasn't been done before maybe it is significant."

"I'm doing this because I really think it can be helpful to Jimmy," she said, adding emphatically, "I like being a woman."

The comment drew a round of applause from the women among the American and Venezuelan journalists.

The First Lady was asked what she thought she had accomplished during her tour of seven Latin America countries. She returns Sunday to Washington. Mrs. Carter said she had three purposes for the trip:

— To develop personal relationships with heads of state. "I think I have done that," she said.

— To discuss the foreign policy of the Carter administration with Latin America leaders. "I think they understand (the policy)," she said.

— To consult with leaders. "We want to cooperate and get input from Latin America on regional as well as global issues," she said. "I think I have opened dialogues that will be helpful."

Library to break ground

BOSTON (AP) — After more than a decade of failed plans, abandoned deadlines and public outcry, ground will finally be broken Sunday for the library that will memorialize the late President John F. Kennedy.

On a point of land jutting into Boston Harbor, members of the assassinated president's family planned to spade up dirt for construction of the modernistic glass and concrete building.

"Since that tragic day in Dallas, it's been 13 years and six months," noted long-time Kennedy friend, David Powers. "It's taken as long to break ground as it took for Jack to be elected congressman, senator and president."

During those years, the library was stalled by controversy over where to put it. Before he died, Kennedy said he wanted it built on a subway yard beside the dorm where he lived as a student at Harvard.

But the subway authority had trouble finding a new location for its yard. Nobody wanted it. And when that problem was finally solved, people who lived near Harvard began to complain about the traffic and crowds the library would attract.

The criticism grew and the building was redesigned. But early in 1975, a Cambridge neighborhood group brought a lawsuit challenging the library's environmental impact study. Reluctantly, the Kennedy family decided to give up the Harvard site.

The library is to be built now on Columbia Point, an isolated peninsula dominated by a new campus of the University of Massachusetts and a rundown low income housing project.

UMW to vote vote Tuesday

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United Mine Workers union is anything but united as it prepares to choose new leaders Tuesday in an election that could help determine the amount of coal the nation has next winter.

Only a clear-cut victory by one of the three candidates seeking the union's presidency would offer hope of restoring some stability to the troubled coal fields. But government labor experts and rank-and-file miners themselves see little chance of that happening and believe a nationwide coal strike is a strong possibility in December.

Many feel a divided union will make the coal companies more intransigent in contract talks this fall to replace the current agreement that expires Dec. 6.

The election is expected to be close, with the winner likely to have the support of less than a majority of the 277,000-member union, which includes 8,000 in Canada. Ousted [illegible] accused of [illegible] murder.

The incumbent is Arnold R. Miller, 64, who led a reform-minded team that five years ago toppled the autocratic regime of W. A. (Tony) Boyle, later convicted of mudering a union rival.

Miller is being challenged by his former ally, Harry R. Patrick, 46, the union's current secretary-treasurer, who split with Miller last year, and by Lee Roy Patterson, 42, a member of the union's executive board who is identified with the old Boyle faction.

Miller is believed to be the frontrunner, with the power of incumbency behind him. Early in the campaign, Patterson was thought to have the edge because he [illegible] the "reform" vote.

However, Patrick has gained on both rivals in recent weeks, picking up support among younger miners who joined the union in the last five years.

Today's news in brief

Interested in phantom rates

COLUMBIA, Mo. (AP) — A member of the newly appointed commission to investigate premium rates on fire and homeowners' insurance policies in Missouri says he is interested in "phantom rate increases."

Brays is a professor of finance at the University of Missouri, and he is among 17 members appointed Friday by Gov. Joseph P. Teasdale to study insurance rates in the state and the mechanics by which they are established.

Brays says the phantom rate increase is achieved by rewording a policy so the amount of coverage or the perils covered are reduced. The effect, he said, is that the policy holder gets less insurance for the same amount of money.

Brays said he had not been advised when the commission will hold its first meeting but he understands the governor is expecting a report from it by November 1.

Carter appeals to public

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter is appealing to the public to pressure Congress to counterbalance pressure from the oil and auto lobbies which he blames for setbacks for his energy plan.

"Unless the American people speak up, the special interests are going to prevail," Carter said in an interview made public Saturday.

Carter said it was "very disturbing" to see congressional panels "begin to chip away at individual component parts" of his energy plan.

"There has to be compensatory interest and pressure from the general public in a constructive fashion on members of Congress demanding strong action to counterbalance the intensely focused and highly visible pressure that is put on the members of Congress by special interest lobbyists here on a daily, hourly basis..." the President said in the interview, which was conducted Friday with members of the Magazine Publishers Association.

"Unless the American public can be aroused to help me and others who believe that this is extremely important and (unless) ...the American public is willing to accept some sacrifice if it is fair, I am afraid that we are not going to have an adequate program when it is over."

Carter vowed to "go more and more public" in his expressions of criticism or support for congressional actions on his energy proposals. Meanwhile, a key congressional leader said Congress will rewrite Carter's energy program to accomplish through tough new laws what the President seeks to do with taxes and rebates.

Rosalynn rates trip success

CARACAS, Venezuela (AP) — Rosalynn Carter, nearing the end of a two-week Latin American good-will tour, said Saturday she made the trip "because I really think it can be helpful to Jimmy," and she rated the tour a success.

Mrs. Carter spoke at a press conference that was delayed when she suffered a slight attack of nausea. The illness forced her to leave a morning meeting with the wife of Venezuela's president and social workers and to miss a scheduled meeting with union officials.

The First Lady was given a nausea pill by her nurse, rested for 45 minutes and then resumed her schedule.

At the press conference, Mrs. Carter was asked if she felt uncomfortable about the feminist aspect of her diplomatic mission.

"I have not been uncomfortable at all," she said. "If it hasn't been done before maybe it is significant."

"I'm doing this because I really think it can be helpful to Jimmy," she said, adding emphatically, "I like being a woman."

The comment drew a round of applause from the women among the American and Venezuelan journalists.

The First Lady was asked what she thought she had accomplished during her tour of seven Latin America countries. She returns Sunday to Washington. Mrs. Carter said she had three purposes for the trip:

— To develop personal relationships with heads of state. "I think I have done that," she said.

— To discuss the foreign policy of the Carter administration with Latin America leaders. "I think they understand (the policy)," she said.

— To consult with leaders. "We want to cooperate and get input from Latin America on regional as well as global issues," she said. "I think I have opened dialogues that will be helpful."

Library to break ground

BOSTON (AP) — After more than a decade of failed plans, abandoned deadlines and public outcry, ground will finally be broken Sunday for the library that will memorialize the late President John F. Kennedy.

On a point of land jutting into Boston Harbor, members of the assassinated president's family planned to spade up dirt for construction of the modernistic glass and concrete building.

"Since that tragic day in Dallas, it's been 13 years and six months," noted long-time Kennedy friend, David Powers. "It's taken as long to break ground as it took for Jack to be elected congressman, senator and president."

During those years, the library was stalled by controversy over where to put it. Before he died, Kennedy said he wanted it built on a subway yard beside the dorm where he lived as a student at Harvard.

But the subway authority had trouble finding a new location for its yard. Nobody wanted it. And when that problem was finally solved, people who lived near Harvard began to complain about the traffic and crowds the library would attract.

The criticism grew and the building was redesigned. But early in 1975, a Cambridge neighborhood group brought a lawsuit challenging the library's environmental impact study. Reluctantly, the Kennedy family decided to give up the Harvard site.

The library is to be built now on Columbia Point, an isolated peninsula dominated by a new campus of the University of Massachusetts and a rundown low income housing project.

UMW to vote vote Tuesday

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United Mine Workers union is anything but united as it prepares to choose new leaders Tuesday in an election that could help determine the amount of coal the nation has next winter.

Only a clear-cut victory by one of the three candidates seeking the union's presidency would offer hope of restoring some stability to the troubled coal fields. But government labor experts and rank-and-file miners themselves see little chance of that happening and believe a nationwide coal strike is a strong possibility in December.

Many feel a divided union will make the coal companies more intransigent in contract talks this fall to replace the current agreement that expires Dec. 6.

The election is expected to be close, with the winner likely to have the support of less than a majority of the 277,000-member union, which includes 8,000 in Canada. One or both of the losers is expected to file legal challenges.

The incumbent is Arnold R. Miller, 54, who led a reform-minded team that five years ago toppled the autocratic regime of W. A. (Tony) Boyle, later convicted of mudering a union rival.

Miller is being challenged by his former ally, Harry R. Patrick, 46, the union's current secretary-treasurer, who split with Miller last year, and by Lee Roy Patterson, 42, a member of the union's executive board who is identified with the old Boyle faction.

Miller is believed to be the frontrunner, with the power of incumbency behind him. Early in the campaign, Patterson was thought to have the edge because his two opponents were dividing the "reform" vote.

However, Patrick has gained on both rivals in recent weeks, picking up support among younger miners who joined the union in the last five years.

Credit life bill clears hurdle

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — After four years of attempts to bring credit life insurance transactions under state regulation, that measure has cleared one of its few remaining legislative hurdles.

A joint legislative compromise panel boosted the bill to the House and Senate floors Tuesday after five meetings which had some House conferees concerned about the bill's chances of surviving the compromise discussion.

"We were getting worried about the bill," says Rep. Bud Fendler, D-St. Louis. "In the beginning ... we couldn't even get to first base."

But after a tradeoff on the bill, negotiators signed the compromise and it went to the chamber floor where it must still be finally approved before before being sent to Gov. Joseph P. Teasdale for his signature.

Under the measure, the state director of insurance would be allowed to regulate commissions and premiums on credit life and disability insurance transactions in Missouri.

Premiums could be cut by as much as 25 per cent, state insurance officials say, because some credit insurance agents now charge as much as 80 per cent commissions.

Credit life and disability insurance is designed to insure that a loan will be repaid if the borrower dies or is disabled and cannot meet his financial commitment.

Lawmakers on the compromise panel haggled over two provisions in the bill before accepted it as the final version.

One controversial provision, which was eliminated from the bill by the panel, would have extended the regulation of credit life insurance to out-of-state companies. That provision had been wanted by House members of the committee, but they conceded in order to win the Senate over on another provision.

The other part of the bill, which was accepted by the panel, would allow only the dollar amount of claims paid by an insurance company to be deducted from its revenues for purposes of figuring the rate at which it could write credit insurance.

If insurance companies paid out a high percentage of their revenues in claims, for example, the state insurance director could increase the credit insurance rates. And if the company's other operating costs were allowed deducted from revenues for figuring rates, still higher rates would be allowed, state insurance officials say.

Teasdale forms panel to study insurance

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Gov. Joseph Teasdale today issued an executive order establishing a 17-member commission to study fire and homeowners insurance rates and Missouri insurance laws.

The commission consists of consumer representatives, fire protection officials, insurance agents and representatives of insurance companies. The commission, with staff assistance from the state Division of Insurance and the Department of Consumer Affairs, Regulation and Licensing, will evaluate rate levels, how rates are established and make recommendations to the governor.

"Responsible regulation of insurance depends to a great degree on the adequacy of state laws," Teasdale said. "A recent series of requests for rate increases and a questionable recommendation by the state's largest insurance rating organization make it necessary to review these statutes with the public interest in mind."

Teasdale said several issues point to the need for the commission including a recent decision by the Insurance Services Organization calling for elimination of the present system of fire insurance rate calssification for Missouri towns and cities. ISO based its rate recommendations on 10 categories which allowed lower rates in cities and towns that provided better fire protection.

Unfair discrimination in rates and rating plans and a reduced availability of homeowners coverage, especially in inner cities and older neighborhoods, also were cited by Teasdale as problems that the commission needs to study.

The commission will also examine the effects of a change in the system used by Missouri insurors to set their rates.

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — The Senate bailed out but the House and governor decided to sit tight Friday afternoon after a telephoned bomb threat was received at the office of Gov. Josep P. Teasdale.

Charlotte Collet, the governor's receptionist, said she received a telephone call at 1:23 p.m., and a femal voice on the other end said, "There's a bomb in the building." The caller then hung up, the receptionist said.

Teasdale advised his staffers to vacate the office and take the rest of the day off, but the governor remained after a search of his office turned up no bomb. Legislative leaders were warned of the threat.

The House was informed of the situation by Speaker Kenneth Rothman, and its members voted with a show of hands to remain and continue deliberations.

The Senate, meanwhile, was preparing to meet in afternoon session, when President Pro Tem Norman Merrell got the word.

"We've got to evacuate the building, there's a bomb threat," Merrell said to Sen. John Schneider, the majority leader, who was standing outside the chamber.

Schneider indicated he preferred to ignore the theat, but by that time word had spread through the Senate's offices and senators and secretaries were already evacuating the building.

Slew makes history with Belmont win

NEW YORK (AP) — Seattle Slew made racing history Saturday with a front-running victory in the $181,800 Belmont Stakes that made him the first unbeaten Triple Crown winner.

With a crowd of 70,229, second biggest in Belmont Stakes history, roaring on every stride, the Slew took complete charge turning for home.

The order of finish duplicated that of the Kentucky Derby, as Run Dusty Run finished second and Sanhedrin third.

Seattle Slew, winning his ninth start, became the 10th Triple Crown winner and the first since Secretariat in 1973. The other nine all had tasted defeat before their Triple Crown quests began.

The Slew did things his way Saturday, taking the lead out of the gate and setting his own pace. He carried Karen Taylor's black-and-yellow silks over the first half-mile in 48 2-5 seconds. He ran the three-quarters in 1:14, 1¼ miles in 2:034-5 and completed the 1½ miles in 2:29 3-5 on a muddy track under scale weight of 126 pounds.

When the son of Bold Reasoning reached the finish, he was four lengths in front of Run Dusty Run. Sanhedrin was another two lengths back and 2¼ lengths in front of 60-1 shot Mr. Red Wing.

As the crowd cheered, Cruguet brought the champion back to the winner's circle, wildly waving his yellow cap.

The Frenchman, who had been criticized for his riding in some of Slew's earlier races, had said after the Flamingo Stakes in Florida: "If they didn't beat me today, they'll never beat me."

And so far, the Slew has kept Cruguet the No. 1 prophet in racing.

The big question before the Belmont was: Can Seattle Slew handle 1½ miles?

He did, in his own sweet time, and his margin was the biggest of any of his Triple Crown victories. He beat Run Dusty Run by 1¾ lengths in the 1¼-mile Derby and Iron Constitution by 1½ lengths in the 1 3-16-mile Preakness.

Iron Constitution, owned by Harry T. Mangurian Jr., finished fifth in the Belmont and was followed by Spirit Level, Sir Sir and Make Amends. Hey Hey J.P. and Leading Scorer were scratched.

However, the Belmont was not problem-free for Seattle Slew. He showed up in the paddock at 5:33 p.m., EDT, two minutes past the call for riders up, and the post had to be delayed five minutes to 5:47 p.m.

"There were so many cars parked on the backside and they came in one direction, so you couldn't get through," Karen Taylor's husband Mickey said of Slew's slow trip to the paddock from distant Barn 54.

But once the starting gate opened, there was only one route for the brown 3-year-old colt. And that was straight to the finish line and then on to the winner's circle and into history.

Seattle Slew broke alertly while Meadow Stable's Spirit Level went right with him. And they dueled into the clubhouse turn. At the end of the first quarter-mile the Slew was 1½ lengths in front of Spirit Level, ridden by Antonio Graell, with Run Dusty Run, ridden by Sandy Hawley, another 1½ lengths back.

At the end of the first half mile the first three positions and the margins were unchanged.

When they reached the pole, marking a half-mile left in the race, the Slew's 1½-length leading margin was over Run Dusty Run as Spirit Level dropped back to third.

Then Slew was in the turn and the Belmont was over. When he hit the wuarter pole, his margin was four lengths over Sanhedrin, ridden by Jorge Velasquez, with Run Dusty Run another head back.

"What an experience!" said Slew's trainer, Billy Turner, who was fired from training Dust Commander before that colt won the Derby in 1970. "It's really hard to believe. I feel like a coach standing on the sideline, watching a super athlete perform. When I saw he did the half mile in 48 something, I knew it was all over," said Turner, meaning he realized Slew would have plenty left for a finishing drive.

Karen Taylor said simply: "He's the greatest horse there ever is...uhh...ever was."

That argument won't be settled for some time—if ever—but Seattle Slew has one distinction that no one can ever take away from him: He went into the grueling Triple Crown unbeaten and came out the same way.

The crowd cheered Slew from the minute he showed up in the paddock, and there's no doubt that the colt, whom critics insisted was untested, had caught the public's imagination. He didn't come close to Secretariat's Belmont and American record time of 2:24, or Secretariat's winning margin of 31 lengths—but he did outdraw Big Red. Saturday's turnout of 70,229 was 2,624 more than showed up in 1973 to watch Secretariat become the ninth Triple Crown winner and the first in 25 years.

The Belmont Stakes' record attendance is 82,694, set in 1971 when Canonero II finished fourth in his bid to win the Belmont and Triple Crown.

Seattle Slew, whose yearling sale purchase price was $17,500 and whose value now could be as high as $14 million, joined some of the great names of the turf with his feat Saturday.

As a landmark athletic achievement, it can be matched against only the supreme accomplishments in other fields of endeavor—Roger Maris' 61 home runs, O.J. Simpson's 2,000 yards rushing. It is, perhaps, most closely akin to Dr. Roger Bannister's triumph over the four-minute mile.

Al Geiberger, after his historic 59 for 18 holes of golf, made a veiled reference to Dr. Bannister's enduring breakthrough.

"Now, everybody will be shooting 59," Geiberger said.

It doesn't seem likely.

The barrier has been broken. But it seems improbable that a floodtide of scores in the 50s will sweep golf in the fashion that sub-four minute miles followed Bannister's run.

It had been 20 years since Sam Snead became the seventh man to shoot a record 60. In recent years only a handful of men had even challenged.

Johnny Miller has had three rounds of 61. One of those was with an eagle three on the 18th hole. As the other rounds developed, he had only one real chance for a record score. In neither of them did he stand over a putt for a 59. Bert Yancey shot 61 at Indian Wells in the 1974 Bob Hope Desert Golf Classic at Palm Springs, Calif.

There have been other scores in the 50s. Globetrotter Gary Player did it on a short course in a pro tournament in Brazil about three years ago.

Snead, Mike Souchak and others have done it. But they did not do it in pro tour competition.

Homero Blancas once shot a 55, on a course that measured less than 6,000 yards, in a collegiate tournament in West Texas.

But those accomplishments can be compared with the 72 home runs Joe Bauman hit in the old Longhorn League.

Geiberger did it in the majors, in the highest level of competition golf can offer. He did it over a course, Colonial Country Club, that is less than easy—7,193 yards in length, heavily wooded with water coming into play on eight holes.

"The greatest thing I ever heard of," Lee Trevino said.

"We knew it would happen—we just didn't know where or when or by who," said Johnny Miller.

"It was inevitable," Jack Nicklaus said. "But I doubt that it will become commonplace. At least not immediately.

"The human race is becoming bigger, stronger, faster, smarter, healthier. Equipment is becoming better. In time, a score in the 50s may not be startling.

That singular distinction belongs to Al Geiberger, a soft-spoken, almost painfully shy, 39-year-old veteran of 18 years of tour activity. He has won the PGA National Championship and nine other titles. He'd joined the exclusive ranks of the men who have won $1 million in prize money.

NEW YORK (AP) — The National Basketball Association draft was only 11 picks old, but Milwaukee Bucks owner Jim Fitzgerald couldn't contain his enthusiam any longer.

He burst into the press room at the Milwaukee Arena, where local writers were following Friday's draft. A broad grin lit his face as he declared, "We probably had the greatest draft of any team in NBA history, at least on paper."

Indeed, the Bucks used their three first-round draft choices to collar three of the very best players available in a rather lean year—center Kent Benson of Indiana and forwards Marques Johnson of UCLA and Ernie Grunfeld of Tennessee.

The New Orleans Jazz, by contrast, could have taken the day off. They didn't get to choose until the final pick of the second round, when they settled for lightly regarded forward Essie Hollis of St. Bonaventure. And in the seventh round they tabbed Lucy Harris, the star of Delta State's women's team, who upon hearing of her selection mused, "I might just show up and surprise people."

Why did the Kings go for Jenner?

"It was in deference to all those people who have written in saying we should draft the best athlete available," said Kings GM Joe Axelson. "So we did. Besides, it was more fun than passing."

In a more serious vein, here's how each club did in the draft:

ATLANTA—Needed a center to play between star forwards Truck Robinson and John Drew, got one with potential in 7-1 Tree Rollins of Clemson. Scouts say, however, that Rollins will need some time to develop.

BOSTON—Unhappy with forward Sidney Wicks, landed a talented athlete in UNC-Charlotte's Cornbread Maxwell, who played center in college but seems physically suited for the switch to power forward.

CHICAGO—Needing backcourt depth, went for Olympian Tate Armstrong of Duke, a guard who was injured most of his senior year. Three good second-rounders in guard Mike Glenn of Southern Illinois and forwards Steve Sheppard of Maryland and Mark Landsberger of Arizona State.

CLEVELAND—Jim Cleamons is a free agent and may go elsewhere, so went for guards Ed Jordan of Rutgers and Steve Grote of Michigan.

DETROIT—Lots of veteran talent on the roster, picked a local sleeper, 6-9, 235-pounder center Ben Poquette of Central Michigan, then took another good rebounder, John Irving of Hofstra.

DENVER—Traded nearly all its frontcourt reserves to land guard Brian Taylor of KC, filled some holes with forward-center Tommy LaGarde of North Carolina and guard-forward Anthony Roberts of Oral Roberts.

GOLDEN STATE—Took Michigan's lightning-quick Rickey Green No. 1, which has to make Gus Williams, Charlie Johnson and Charles Dudley look over their shoulders.

HOUSTON—Rockets' development will come from within. Only rookie of note is 6-9 Larry Moffett of Nevada-Las Vegas.

INDIANA—Financial problems are the big concern here, but some scouts were high on the Pacers' top pick, forward Alonzo Bradley of Texas Southern.

KANSAS CITY—Went for instant offense and got it in guard Otis Birdsong of Houston and forward Eddie Owens of Nevada-Las Vegas, two players who can put points on the board in a hurry.

LOS ANGELES—Looking for help at four positions, the fifth being filled rather well by Kareem Abdul-Jabbar. No. 1 pick was Kenny Carr of North Carolina State, the most talented forward this team has had since Elgin Baylor's heyday. Other two first-rounders were guards Brad Davis of Maryland and Norm Nixon of Duquesne, who should help.

MILWAUKEE—Instant rebuilding, with 6-11 two-time All-American Benson the key. Johnson and Grunfeld will more than make up for the expected loss of Bobby Dandridge, a free agent. And second-round pick Glen Williams of St. John's, N.Y., could help as a scoring guard behind Brian Winters.

NEW ORLEANS—Needed lots of help, didn't get it. Hollis and guard-forward Tony Hanson of Connecticut might make the roster. How about a backcourt of Pete Maravich and Lucy Harris?

NEW YORK KNICKS—Wanted a young guard who could play defense and move the ball around, got him in Minnesota's Ray Williams. Forward Glen Gondrezick of Nevada-Las Vegas may also help.

NEW YORK NETS—Only had one pick in first three rounds, landed a blue chipper in forward Bernard King of Tennessee. Still need a big center, however.

PHILADELPHIA—Expected to go high for a guard, instead went for big men like Glenn Mosley of Seton Hall, the nation's leading rebounder, Wilson Washington of Old Dominion and Bob Elliott of Arizona. All were centers in college but will likely be tried at forward. Did come up with a promising big guard in Herm Harris of Arizona.

PHOENIX—Season ended early when starting forwards Curtis Perry and Gar Heard got hurt, landed a good cornerman in Walter Davis of North Carolina. Remember, Suns have already signed a fine prospect in 6-10 Bayard Forrest, who played for Athletes in Action last year.

PORTLAND—Tabbed Rich Laurel of Hofstra, a forward who can score, something the Blazers did not have on their bench last year.

Three more teams drop from Little River tourney

CANALOU— Bernie, Kewanee and Shangrila of Sikeston were eliminated Friday night from the Little River Slow Pitch Tournament after dropping loser's bracket decisions.

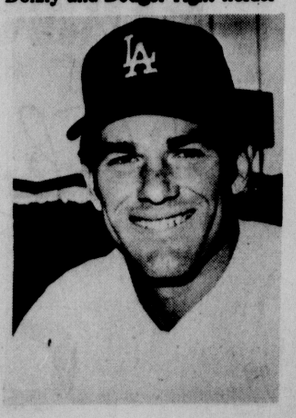
Kewanee scored four runs in the eighth to take a 10-6 extra-inning victory over Bernie. Kippen had tripled to tie the game for Bernie in the seventh. Palmer ripped three hits for Kewanee.

Backfisch went 3-for-3 at the dish for New Hamburg as they downed Shangrila 10-3. Klipfel and Kluesner each banged out three baseknocks as New Hamburg edged Kewanee 11-9 in the elimination game that followed at 9:30.

Canalou met Oran's Sunshine Boys and New Madrid played Jolliff Flights in Saturday night's winner's bracket contests. The losers losers were to have met at 9:30 with the winner of that contest surviving to meet New Hamburg Sunday in the loser's bracket.

Cardinal rally falls short

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Steve Garvey knocked in four runs, two with a home run, leading the Los Angeles Dodgers to a 9-8 victory over the St. Louis Cardinals Saturday night in a game marred by a fight between Cardinal pitcher John Denny and Dodger right fielder Reggie Smith.



Garvey knocked in two runs with a single in the Dodgers' six-run second inning and smacked his homer in the fourth.

The brawl erupted in the second when Denny, 7-1, after being hammered for four hits and four runs, hit Smith in the back with a pitch.

Smith dropped his bat and charged the mound, where he and Denny exchanged punches. Both dugouts emptied but order was restored within minutes.

Neither Smith nor Denny player was ejected but Dodger reliever Elias Sosa was thrown out of the game. Cardinals Manager Vern Rapp lifted Denny after the field cleared.

Mike Garman, 3-0, worked three innings in relief of starter Burt Hooten to pick up the victory while Denny, 7-1, suffered his first loss of the season.

Saints, Herrin meet in twinbill today

The Sikeston Saints try to put league victories back-to-back for the first time this year when they host Herrin in a 1 p.m. doubleheader at V.F.W. Stadium this afternoon. The Saints most recent Bi-State game was a 6-2 victory over Perryville Thursday.

Pitchers in today's twinbill are proposed to be righthander Sammie Taylor in the first game and lefty Ricky Taylor in the second. Sam Taylor has an 0-2 record. It will be the first outing for the lefty Taylor.

Slew makes history with Belmont win

NEW YORK (AP) — Seattle Slew made racing history Saturday with a front-running victory in the $181,800 Belmont Stakes that made him the first unbeaten Triple Crown winner.

With a crowd of 70,229, second biggest in Belmont Stakes history, roaring on every stride, the Slew took complete charge turning for home.

The order of finish duplicated that of the Kentucky Derby, as Run Dusty Run finished second and Sanhedrin third.

Seattle Slew, winning his ninth start, became the 10th Triple Crown winner and the first since Secretariat in 1973. The other nine all had tasted defeat before their Triple Crown quests began.

The Slew did things his way Saturday, taking the lead out of the gate and setting his own pace. He carried Karen Taylor's black-and-yellow silks over the first half-mile in 48 2-5 seconds. He ran the three-quarters in 1:14, 1¼ miles in 2:034-5 and completed the 1½ miles in 2:29 3-5 on a muddy track under scale weight of 126 pounds.

When the son of Bold Reasoning reached the finish, he was four lengths in front of Run Dusty Run. Sanhedrin was another two lengths back and 2¼ lengths in front of 60-1 shot Mr. Red Wing.

As the crowd cheered, Cruguet brought the champion back to the winner's circle, wildly waving his yellow cap.

The Frenchman, who had been criticized for his riding in some of Slew's earlier races, had said after the Flamingo Stakes in Florida: "If they didn't beat me today, they'll never beat me."

And so far, the Slew has kept Cruguet the No. 1 prophet in racing.

The big question before the Belmont was: Can Seattle Slew handle 1½ miles?

He did, in his own sweet time, and his margin was the biggest of any of his Triple Crown victories. He beat Run Dusty Run by 1¾ lengths in the 1¼-mile Derby and Iron Constitution by 1½ lengths in the 1 3-16-mile Preakness.

Iron Constitution, owned by Harry T. Mangurian Jr., finished fifth in the Belmont and was followed by Spirit Level, Sir Sir and Make Amends. Hey Hey J.P. and Leading Scorer were scratched.

However, the Belmont was not problem-free for Seattle Slew. He showed up in the paddock at 5:33 p.m., EDT, two minutes past the call for riders up, and the post had to be delayed five minutes to 5:47 p.m.

"There were so many cars parked on the backside and they came in one direction, so you couldn't get through," Karen Taylor's husband Mickey said of Slew's slow trip to the paddock from distant Barn 54.

But once the starting gate opened, there was only one route for the brown 3-year-old colt. And that was straight to the finish line and then on to the winner's circle and into history.

Seattle Slew broke alertly while Meadow Stable's Spirit Level went right with him. And they dueled into the clubhouse turn. At the end of the first quarter-mile the Slew was 1½ lengths in front of Spirit Level, ridden by Antonio Graell, with Run Dusty Run, ridden by Sandy Hawley, another 1½ lengths back.

At the end of the first half mile the first three positions and the margins were unchanged.

When they reached the pole, marking a half-mile left in the race, the Slew's 1½-length leading margin was over Run Dusty Run as Spirit Level dropped back to third.

Then Slew was in the turn and the Belmont was over. When he hit the wuarter pole, his margin was four lengths over Sanhedrin, ridden by Jorge Velasquez, with Run Dusty Run another head back.

"What an experience!" said Slew's trainer, Billy Turner, who was fired from training Dust Commander before that colt won the Derby in 1970. "It's really hard to believe. I feel like a coach standing on the sideline, watching a super athlete perform. When I saw he did the half mile in 48 something, I knew it was all over," said Turner, meaning he realized Slew would have plenty left for a finishing drive.

Karen Taylor said simply: "He's the greatest horse there ever is...uhh...ever was."

That argument won't be settled for some time—if ever—but Seattle Slew has one distinction that no one can ever take away from him: He went into the grueling Triple Crown unbeaten and came out the same way.

The crowd cheered Slew from the minute he showed up in the paddock, and there's no doubt that the colt, whom critics insisted was untested, had caught the public's imagination. Three more teams drop from Little River tourney

CANALOU— Bernie, Kewanee and Shangrila of Sikeston were eliminated Friday night from the Little River Slow Pitch Tournament after dropping loser's bracket decisions.

Kewanee scored four runs in the eighth to take a 10-6 extra-inning victory over Bernie. Kippen had tripled to tie the game for Bernie in the seventh. Palmer ripped three hits for Kewanee.

Backfisch went 3-for-3 at the dish for New Hamburg as they downed Shangrila 10-3. Klipfel and Kluesner each banged out three baseknocks as New Hamburg edged Kewanee 11-9 in the elimination game that followed at 9:30.

Canalou met Oran's Sunshine Boys and New Madrid played Jolliff Flights in Saturday night's winner's bracket contests. The losers losers were to have met at 9:30 with the winner of that contest surviving to meet New Hamburg Sunday in the loser's bracket.

Saints, Herrin meet in twinbill today

The Sikeston Saints try to put league victories back-to-back for the first time this year when they host Herrin in a 1 p.m. doubleheader at V.F.W. Stadium this afternoon. The Saints most recent Bi-State game was a 6-2 victory over Perryville Thursday.

Pitchers in today's twinbill are proposed to be righthander Sammie Taylor in the first game and lefty Ricky Taylor in the second. Sam Taylor has an 0-2 record. It will be the first outing for the lefty Taylor.

Seek ways to make turkey hunting safe but successful

If you showed a wild turkey the Mona Lisa, would he be able to appreciate the subtle colors, the rich hues?

Or would he just say, "Hey, who's the lady with the gray dress on?"

The question is whether or not turkeys have color vision which is interesting in itself, but hardly earth-shaking. But the fact that wild turkey hunters have gun accidents at a higher rate than any other--there were 16 in 1976 and 15 in 1977--is tied to turkey color vision.

For hunters in full camouflage are difficult to distinguish and almost all turkey accidents are the result of a careless hunter shooting at a motion or a sound.

Deer hunters generally wear some bright-colored clothing, orange, red or yellow, because deer do not have color vision. But if a turkey can see (and react) to bright colors, any hunter wearing them might be safe from accident, but isn't likely to come home with a bird.

The Conservation Department has started working on ways to make turkey hunting safer without disturbing a hunter's chance of success.

"Before the 1978 turkey season, we're going to set up an experiment on a controlled basis," says Bud Eyman, hunter education coordinator for the Conservation Department.

There were some tentative experiments during the 1977 season, but nothing conclusive. John Lewis, turkey biologist for the Conservation Department, says he believes turkeys see intensity of color and probably outlines or form, rather than distinct colors.

He says turkey trappers have used bright red blinds without bothering turkeys. Leroy Braungardt, chairman of the Conservation Federation's deer and wild turkey committee, used the mottled red-black camouflage without alarming the turkeys.

But in one hunting accident, two hunters slipped up on a turkey and one wounded the other who was wearing the red-black combination because the shooter thought the red was the turkey's wattles.

Most accidents are the result of a hunter not making certain of his target. Seldom is there a random shot that hits someone. If all hunters abided both by the rules of gun safety and the turkey regulations, there would be virtually no accidents.

The jury of experts is divided on color vision in turkeys. Chickens reportedly see blue and violet poorly, but distinguish red readily (or redly). They have the eye components usually associated with color vision.

But some wild instinct, some subtle intuition must be more important than color vision, for many birds fearlessly approach a vividly-colored tent, yet would not approach a motionless man.

The ideal would be to find that turkeys don't react to the blaze or "hunter,' orange worn by deer hunters, but that may be too much to hope for.

Other colors are a possibility, colors which would stand out to a person but not to a turkey. Most experts feel movement is more alarming to turkeys than color, but the combination of the two may be the most alarming.

Eyman hopes better hunter safety training, combined with hunter-safe clothing will eliminate turkey season accidents.

Can he see color?

There's no doubt this turkey sees the photographer, but whether or not he sees him in color is something else. The Conservation Department is planning a study of turkey color vision in hopes it can discover warning-type clothing that will alert other hunters, but not turkeys, and thus cut down on gun accidents during the annual spring gobbler season. The Missouri Sportswriters and Sportscasters Association has apparently ditched its attempts to select an all-state baesball team this year. The meeting has been cancelled twice because of an illness to a key association leader, and this time it has not been rescheduled.

It's a rotten shame, because as we have noted before in this column, there are four ballplayers from this area who really deserve recognition. The honor of being chosen to the all-state team is the ultimate award a high school athlete can receive. We're sure that Lindy Duncan, Scott Wachter, David Shell and Bob Volkerding have looked forward to the chance to receive the honor since Little League. And now, because of a lack of interest in the organization that picks the team, they won't have that chance.

True, an all-state team will probably be chosen by the coaches. We'll admit that the sportswriters and sportscasters team has not always honored all the right players, but there were glaring injustices in the coaches team that was selected last season. If there's anything more difficult than getting total representation from every newspaper and radio station in the state, it's probably getting a complete turnout of all the baseball coaches in Missouri. And without a good turnout, it's impossible to be completely accurate in the selection of the team. And some very deserving players were left off the 1976 team because their coaches didn't show up at the meeting to nominate their own athletes.

We wish there was some kind of an award we could give to the four young men mentioned above--something special to let them know at least one newspaper cares. For two weekends in a row, a writer from the Standard got up at 5:30 in the morning to drive to St. Louis to represent our area at the meeting, only to find out the meeting had been cancelled.

But no award we could present would take the place of the one these boys deserve. It just wouldn't be the same as having made all-state. And this column is probably an even poorer substitute.

We just want our readers to know that someone appreciates the accomplishments of our best ballplayers. We care.

There have been quite a few remarks made to us about the situation at the Sikeston Sports Complex involving the frequent sandstorms on the Little League fields last week.

It seems that many parents felt that their boys (and girls) should have been pulled off the fields when the visibility became so bad that the players were in danger of injury because of not being able to to see the baseball.

I was not at the complex on the night in question, but I understand that it was quite a mess. Since I wasn't there, I'm not in a position to question the judgement of Little League commissioner Mike Foster leaving the youngsters on the field to play in the sand. But the fact remains that quite a few mommas daddies were upset with the conditions at the ballpark and with the decision not to halt play.

I'd like to think that Mike Foster is my friend. I'm not going to say he was right in what he decided to do or that those who have done the griping were wrong, because I wasn't there and I don't have all the facts about the conditions. I can only say what I do know. First, the only equipment that the commissioner has to use in watering down the four Little League diamonds is a standard water hose. The fields are manicured daily as best he can with what he has to work with.

Second, anyone who has ever talked about the Little League with Mike Foster knows that he is not just involved in the program for the small salary he makes. He is genuinely concerned about the kids and the program. He has worked on the fields at the complex even during the off season when he is not paid for doing so, and doesn't miss a night at the complex. He has to listen to the gripes of the parents of about 360 boys. And I can't remember when he has failed to bring the scoresheets from the Little League games by the Standard office for publication the next day.

Again, I'm not saying he was right or wrong in deciding not to suspend play. But he did do what he thought was the best thing at the time.

We hope the City of Sikeston will provide a better means for preparing the Little League fields for play--a sprinkling system, a larger hose, something to make it easier to water down the fields and alleviate sand problem. In the meantime, friendly, constructive suggestions by the parents of Little Leaguers will go farther than griping and criticism in making a better summer baseball program for their youngsters.

Dodgers, Reds top All-Star balloting

NEW YORK (AP)— Three Los Angeles Dodgers, including top vote-getter Steve Garvey, and three Cincinnati Reds are tops in the National League at their positions in balloting among fans for baseball's NL All-Star Team.

The first weekly results were announced Friday by Commissioner Bowie Kuhn.

Garvey compiled 334,407 votes among fans at first base to take a wide lead over Pittsburgh's Willie Stargell with 126,170. Third baseman Ron Cey and outfielder Reggie Smith are the other Dodgers who lead at their positions. Cey leads Cincinnati's Pete Rose 271,987 votes to 161,841. Smith has collected 193,689 votes compared with 178,705 for runnerup Dave Parker of Pittsburgh and 176,339 for third-place Lou Brock of St. Louis.

The Cincinnati vote leaders are catcher Johnny Bench, second baseman Joe Morgan and shortstop Dave Concepcion. Bench has 217,227 ballots to 176,572 for St. Louis' Ted Simmons, Morgan leads Los Angeles' Dave Lopes 255,170 to 141,161 and Conception leads Philadelphia's Larry Bowa 218,086 to 140,586.

The All-Star Game will be played at Yankee Stadium July 19.

Freed levels off against Dodgers

ST. LOUIS (AP)— Widely traveled Roger Freed is trying his skills with a sixth major league club and seeking to carve a new image.

After five false starts at baseball's top level, Freed leveled off with his bat Friday night for the St. Louis Cardinals and took a step in that direction.

"I had the label of being a non-breaking ball hitter," said Freed after belting a pinch single off a curve to produce an 8-7 Cards victory over the Los Angeles Dodgers.

"Basically I don't care what I hit," said the 1976 minor league home run king, whose blow came in the bottom of the 12th off the Dodgers' Stan Wall, 1-2. "I had a tendency to open up too much once, but I can hit the breaking ball too."

Freed's hit, his fifth in nine pinch roles for St. Louis to date, came after teammate Joel Youngblood grounded into a bizarre double play, apparently stymying a Cards bid.

A single and stolen base by Tony Scott to start the inning led to the intentional walking of Ted Simmons. Keith Hernandez then also walked to load the bases but Scott was forced at the plate and a slow-reacting Simmons also nailed at third base after Youngblood grounded to shortstop Bill Russell.

"I couldn't see; my mind just went blank," said Simmons, who had earlier blasted a home run off knuckle baller Charlie Hough to give St. Louis a 7-7 tie in the 10th.

"Really, I didn't even think about that," said Freed, whose drive redeemed Simmons. "I went up there with the idea I was just going to hit the ball hard."

Prior to Simmons' homer, two-run wallops by Steve Yeager and Rick Monday climaxed a Los Angeles comeback from a 6-0 Cards lead.

Russell then lived on shortstop Garry Templeton's error to start the Dodgers' 10th and scored following Ron Cey's single on a sacrifice fly by Steve Garvey to establish a 7-6 Los Angeles edge.

"You just have to gauge the speed," said Simmons, whose tying homer off Hough was hig first since May 9, also off a knuckle ball by the Cincinnati Reds' Dale Murray. "It just flattened out. It didn't move much."

St. Louis Manager Vern Rapp, the field pilot for Freed in the minors at Indianapolis in 1974 and last year at Denver, where Freed socked 42 homers and hit .309 as the American Association player of the year, afterward discussed the hitting refinements of the 31-year-old player.

"I had the label of being a non-breaking ball hitter," said Freed after belting a pinch single off a curve to produce an 8-7 Cards victory over the Los Angeles Dodgers.

"Basically I don't care what I hit," said the 1976 minor league home run king, whose blow came in the bottom of the 12th off the Dodgers' Stan Wall, 1-2. "I had a tendency to open up too much once, but I can hit the breaking ball too."

Freed's hit, his fifth in nine pinch roles for St. Louis to date, came after teammate Joel Youngblood grounded into a bizarre double play, apparently stymying a Cards bid.

A single and stolen base by Tony Scott to start the inning led to the intentional walking of Ted Simmons. Keith Hernandez then also walked to load the bases but Scott was forced at the plate and a slow-reacting Simmons also nailed at third base after Youngblood grounded to shortstop Bill Russell.

"I couldn't see; my mind just went blank," said Simmons, who had earlier blasted a home run off knuckle baller Charlie Hough to give St. Louis a 7-7 tie in the 10th.

"Really, I didn't even think about that," said Freed, whose drive redeemed Simmons. "I went up there with the idea I was just going to hit the ball hard."

Prior to Simmons' homer, two-run wallops by Steve Yeager and Rick Monday climaxed a Los Angeles comeback from a 6-0 Cards lead.

Russell then lived on shortstop Garry Templeton's error to start the Dodgers' 10th and scored following Ron Cey's single on a sacrifice fly by Steve Garvey to establish a 7-6 Los Angeles edge.

"You just have to gauge the speed," said Simmons, whose tying homer off Hough was hig first since May 9, also off a knuckle ball by the Cincinnati Reds' Dale Murray. "It just flattened out. It didn't move much."

St. Louis Manager Vern Rapp, the field pilot for Freed in the minors at Indianapolis in 1974 and last year at Denver, where Freed socked 42 homers and hit .309 as the American Association player of the year, afterward discussed the hitting refinements of the 31-year-old player.

State Senate Happenings

by
SEN. NELSON B. TINNIN
25th DISTRICT

JEFFERSON CITY— I was extremely proud last week when Governor Teasdale called and asked me if I would approve Steve Bradford of Hayti as his top Administrative Aide. I am so proud to have Steve in this position and so proud the Governor's top Administrative Aide is from our 25th Senatorial District.

Stephen C. Bradford, who has worked under three Missouri Governors, was named state Commissioner of Administration by Governor Joseph Teasdale.

Bradford has been deputy commissioner since April. The $30,000 a year commissioner's post entails over-seeing the budgeting, accounting, employment, planning and design and construction divisions of state government.

The 31-year-old Bradford, whose appointment must be approved by the Missouri Senate, joined state government eight years ago during the administration of former Governor Warren E. Hearnes.

He became state planning director under former Governor Christopher Bond and was elevated to deputy commissioner of administration under Teasdale.

Teasdale said that he is confident Bradford will be approved by the state Senate although he does not meet all the educational requirements for the job set by state law. The law requires the commissioner to have a master's degree in public administration with major courses in political science.

Bradford has a bachelor's degree in business administration and a master's degree in urban and regional planning, both from the University of Mississippi. However, Teasdale said he is confident the Senate will permit Bradford's work experience to be substituted for the educational requirement. Bradford is a native of Hayti.

I took Steve before the Senate Gubernatorial Appointments Committee for approval Thursday morning.

All paper work on bills ends at midnight June 15, so this is the drawdown and what this six months session has accomplished.

As a bill passes both houses it is sent to the Governor's Office and there is where it reaches its fate. The Governor has the right to put his signature on the bill and the bill bewcomes law or he has the right not to sign the bill and it is called VETOED and does not become law. On Appropriations Bills the Governor has the right to cut the amount of money appropriated but he cannot add to the amount of money appropriated nor can he change the wording of any bill sent to him.

All Appropriations Bills have to be finished by this next Wednesday night which is one week before the session ends. When the session starts this week we will be in session day and night and over the week-end until 12 o'clock June 15th.

NEW SCHOOL FUNDS FORMULA DEBATED— Senate Substitute for House Bill 131, better known as the "New School Foundation Formula," is a bill to pump more money into the areas of the state less able to pay for the education of their children.

This formula has been worked onfor the past four years. This bill is a Senate Substitute for the measure introduced in the House. I appointed a subcommittee to rewrite the bill and one of the major changes made was to include the income factor which helps give more money to areas with less income per individual. The income factor will help Southeast Missouri and Practically all of the state south of the Missouri River.

The next step in the passage of this formula is for the House to adopt the Senate version of the bill as produced by the Senate Education Committee.

This bill was debated by the Senate all day this past Friday and passed the Senate by a vote of 21-10.

The state distributed nearly $429 million to public schools in Missouri this year, and the Senate has projected that an additional $52 million will have to be pumped into the new formula to keep certain districts from losing state aid.

Proponents have based their arguments for a new formula on the calim that the present program gives more funds to richer school districts and fails to take into account the poorer districts' inability to generate revenue through local school tax levies.

The revised formula adds other factors to property assessments and local levies in the computation of state aid. The additional factors include average income of the district's residents, the number of welfare families living within the district and enrollment of the district's schools rather than the schools' average daily attendance.

Under figures provided by the Senate Education Committee, 516 districts in the state would eventually get more state aid under the proposed formula compared with the present system, while 37 would lose money, many of them in St. Louis County.

The House bill is similar to the Senate's but it would penalize about 47 districts.

Attached to the bill as a disclaimer saying that the formula could only be funded to the extent that the legislature would appropriate money for it.

STATUS OF MISSOURI PRISON— The much needed Missouri prison matter seems not to be settled yet. The Senate Appropriations Committee, of which I serve, did appropriate money for a maximum prison to be located in the Jefferson City area on state owned land.

The Governor and his staff think that medium security prisons should be located in the St. Louis and Kansas City areas in order to provide facilities to rehabilitate those incarcerated from the St. Louis and Kansas City areas.

This decision is one that will have to be made by the administration regardless of where it is to be built.

Crowded conditions demand demand that the state do something to increase housing for these people. If something isn't done before long, something may happen in the prison to cause the loss of lives that would otherwise not have happened if more space had been provided to house prisoners.

SENATE BILL 75-GRAIN WAREHOUSE— This bill is the grain warehouse bill and is probably one of my best pieces of legislation passed during the 79th General Assembly.

This bill will require warehousemen to be licensed and bonded, and storage facilities checked to see if proper storage is available.

Bonding and licensing have not been required by the state. This bill covers all storage not regulated by the Federal Warehouse Act. This bill does provide for optional choice of state or federal law.

The warehousing law provides protection for the farmer who brings in grain for storage, to see his grain is kept and not sold by the warehouseman until he has authorized the sale of his grain.

Some areas of the state have had large losses because when the farmer wanted to sell his grain there was no grain in storage and no money to pay for the grain. Some farmers testified before my Agriculture Committee that they had lost as much as $20,000. I think this bill will prevent losses in the future. No legislation will prevent a crook from stealing but this bill will regulate the industry to prevent practically all losses.

The bill is on the Governor's Desk for his signature.

SENATE SUBSTITUTE FOR SENATE BILL 74-TEXTBOOK FUND— This bill requires that free textbooks be furnished to all public school children in grades kindergarten through twelve. Books may be paid for from either the free textbook fund or from the incidental fund of the district if the textbook fund is insufficient. The funds may also be used for supplementary texts, library and reference books, contractual educational television services, and instructional supplies.

This is the second year I have carried this bill.

I will be sending the last newsletter in two parts, one this week and one the week the session ends (June 15) so that you will know what is happening. As usual, there are many more bills introduced than can possible by heard in committees, and some of the bills that are let out of committees and get on the House or Senate Calendars are never reached for debate.

There were 488 Senate Bills introduced and 22 Senate Joint Resolutions. There were 877 House Bills introduced and 68 House Joint Resolutions.

SENATE BILL 1— NATURAL RESOURCES LAND EXCHANGE— The bill authorizes the director of the Department of Natural Resources to convey certain lands in Monroe County to the United States and to accept in return over 607 acres from the U.S. over which the U.S. would have flooding and overflow easements. (Signed by the Governor on May 3.)

SENATE BILL 2-DRAINAGE DISTRICTS RECLAMATION PLANS— Senate Bill 2 authorizes the boards of drainage districts to adopt supplemental reclamation plans for draining, leveeing or reclaiming lands from overflow or damage by water, and to lvey a proportional tax on property to be benefitted to pay the costs of the plan. The board could, after approval by property owners, issue bonds to finance such reclamation projects. (Signed by the Governor on May 3.)

SENATE BILL 3-LEVEE DISTRICTS RECLAMATION PLANS— This bill authorizes the boards of levee districts to adopt supplemental plans for leveeing, protecting or reclaiming lands from overflow or damage by water, with the power to levy a new proportional tax on property owners to pay the costs of the supplemental reclamation plan. The boards could also issue bonds to finance the plan, after approval by property owners. (Signed by the Governor on May 3.)

SENATE BILL 5-PROBATION AND PAROLE SALARIES— This bill raises the minimum salary of a probation and parole officer from $9,000 to $10,500 a year. (Awaiting the Governor's Signature.)

SENATE BILL 6-REGULATION OF FUNERAL DIRECTORS— The bill requires funeral directors to take examinations for licensure similar to those required for embalmers. Funeral directors who reside in a county of a state adjacent to Missouri, if the county is contiguous to Missouri, may be licensed as funeral directors. The bill contains a grandfather clause.

Rules and regulations promulgated by the board of embalmers and funeral directors will expire within two years, unless, prior to that time, the General Assembly by concurrent resolution of both houses, approves the rules and regulations. Rules and the authority to promulgate rules will expire on November 30, 1981. (Awaiting the Governor's Signature.)

SENATE COMMITTEE SUBSTITUTE FOR SENATE BILL 49— House Committee Amendment 1 repeals section 287.020, RSMo Supp. 1975, relating to workmen's compensation, and enacts in lieu thereof two new sections relating to the same subject, with an emergency clause.

This bill changes the definitions of the terms "injury" and "personal injury"--violence to the physical structure of the body and to the personal property which is used to make up the physical structure of the body, such as artificial dentures, artificial limbs, glass eyes, eyeglasses, and other prosthesis which are placed in or on the body to replace the physical structure.

In addition, the bill provides that the employer shall be required by the division of workmen's compensation to the labor and industrial relations commission to furnish an injured employee with an artificial eye, eyeglasses, artificial denture, artificial limbs or other prosthesis when such items were damaged or destroyed as a result of a work related accident. (Awaiting the Governor's Signature.)

SENATE BILL 62-BOARD OF DIRECTORS OF FIRE PROTECTION DISTRICTS— Senate Bill 62 repeals section 321.110, RSMo 1969, relating to the powers and duties of the board of directors of fire protection districts, and enacts in lieu thereof one new section relating to the same subject.

This bill allows the boards of directors of fire protection districts with the approval of the qualified voters therein, to provide for the pensioning of the salaried members of its organized fire department, including the pensioning of any such members who become permanently incapacitated for duty as the result of accident or exposure occurring while the members are in the actual performance of their duties. Formerly, this section of the statutes provided only for the payment of death benefits to the widows and minor children of members of the organized fire departments who lose their lives in the performance of their duties.

Automatically, the bill states thatr the board of directors of any fire protection district which has a pension system for the salaried members of its fire department in operation on the effective date of this act may provide for the pensioning of any suche members who hereafter become permanently incapacitated for duty as the result of accident or exposure occurring while the members are in the actual performance of their duties without submission of the proposition to do so to the qualified voters of the district. (Awaiting Governor's Signature.)

SENATE BILL 96-TELEPHONE SERVICE FRAUD— Establishes crime of telephone service fraud for persons who obtain or attempt to obtain services without paying. Establishes crime of Electronic telephone fraud if person uses electronic devices to steal telephone service. (Awaiting the governor's signature.)

SENATE BILL 98-NOTICE OF DISMISSAL— Senate Bill 98 repeals sections 36.380 and 36.390, RSMo Supp. 1975, relating to the state merit system, and enacts in lieu thereof two new sections relating to the same subject.

This bill provides that when it is not practicable to give notice of dismissal to a state merit system employee in person, it may be sent to the employee by certified or registered mail, return receipt requested, at his last mailing address as shown in the personnel records of the appropriate appointing authority. Proof of refusal of the employee to accept delivery or the inability of postal authorities to deliver such mail shall be accepted as evidence that the required notice of dismissal has been given. (Signed by the Governor on May 26.)

SENATE BILL 100-REGULATION OF ACCOUNTS— The bill recodifies laws pertaining to certified public accountants, which had been unchanged since 1943. It will not affect individuals who perform bookkeeping duties, prepare tax returns on an occasional basis, or who are public" or "independent" accountants. The bill places stricter limitations on the use of the term "C.P.A." The bill further provides: 1) that individuals who are employed by private firms could become C.P.A.'s without having tro work for a C.P.A. firm for two years; 2) resident offices of C.P.A. firms would be required to have a C.P.A. on the staff; 3) C.P.A.'s would be required to possess a "live" permit which would be issued yearly; 4) rules and regulations promulgated by the Board of Accountancy will expire within two years unless extended by concurrent resolution of either house and approved by the Governor.

The authority to promulgate rules and regulations will expire November 30, 1981; 5) candidates for licensure as C.P.A.'s will be permitted to re-take any part of the examination they might fail at any regularly scheduled examination. A fee will be required. 6) There will be increased ceilings on fees which can be charged. The amount will be determined by the board of accountancy, within limitations imposed by the board.

A House Amendment provides that the board may develop and implement programs of continuing education, but the board will have no authority to promulgate rules and regulations affecting C.P.A.'s who have been previously licensed without authorization from the General Assembly. (Awaiting the Governor's Signature.)

SENATE BILL 124-NATIONAL GUARD RE-ENLISTMENT BONUS— Senate Bill 124 grants a $100 per year bonus for re-enlistment in the Missouri National Guard. Payments are to be made on a yearly basis and if the full enlistment is not served a proportional repayment must be made unless the termination was because of death or disability. The law will expire if the military draft is reinstated. (Awaiting the Governor's Signature.)

HOUSE COMMITTEE SUBSTITUTE FOR SENATE BILL 164-BUS WEIGHTS— This bill raises the allowable weight for the rear axles of buses from 18,000 pounds on a single axle and 32,000 pounds on a tandem axle to 20,000 pounds and 34,000 pounds. (Awaiting the Governor's Signature.)

Chamber calls meeting on Highway 60 issue

DEXTER— The Dexter Chamber of Commerce will conduct a special meeting Thursday to try to reach a single position on the proposed interchanges on a four-lane Highway 60. The meeting will be at 7:30 p.m., in the Cityf Administration Building.

The Missouri Highway Department is holding a public hearing in Dexter June 28 to hear community opinion on the location of the interchanges.

The Chamber's Streets and Highway Committee, with chairman Harold Williams, has been looking at the proposed locations for several months, and there still appears to be some disagreement as to where they should be.

The highway department is proposing an interchange at the junction of Highway 60 and Route AD, just west of Dexter, and a later interchange at Route ZZ, further west.

Under highway department proposals, access to Dexter from the four-lane Highway 60 would be at the present Highway 60-25 interchange, the Route AD interchange and later at the Route ZZ location.

The highway department proposals have been criticized by the board of directors of the Dexter Memorial Hospital, who feel that there should be access to One Mile Road, and the hospital, from Highway 60. Under the present highway department proposals, those wanting to come to the hospital from Highway 60 would have to exit at the 60-25 interchange or the Route AD interchange, and then use "outer roads."

The hospital board has been in touch with the highway department, voicing its concern about the need for a One Mile Road exit or interchange.

Other members of the Chamber feel that the Route AD interchange is too far out, and that the interchange should be located somewhere between One Mile Road and the State Highway Department maintenance shed on Highway 60.

Others feel that the Route AD interchange would be alright if some arrangements can be made access to the Hospital on One Mile Road.

Other members of the Chamber feel that the interchanges would be alright as proposed, if the highway department would make some assurances to the community that Business Route 60 (Highway 114) would be up-graded and widened.

"That's why we want to have this public meeting before the Highway Department hearing," chairman Williams said. "We should go to the hearing with a single proposal and comments, letting the Highway Department know exactly what the community wants."

It is hoped that a written "community statement" on location of the interchanges can come from the meeting.

Simmons and court to meet and discusses back payment

CHARLESTON— A meeting between former Sheriff W. J. Simmons and the County Court to discuss back payment of mileage costs for delivering summonses was set for Wednesday by the court.

The meeting is being held in connection with the attempt by Simmons to collect $2,371.70 for back payment of mileage costs he incurred while delivering summonses for the county. A bill in the amount was submitted to the county court in April, listing unpaid mileage costs dating back to February of 1961.

An opinion received by the court from Prosecuting Attorney Edward C. Graham stated that he felt the county was bound by a five-year statute of limitation. The court tabled a decision, pending a further decision attorney.

A countywide committee to discuss the problems of the county's indigent bills with the Missouri Delta Community Hospital was formed during the court's regular monthly meeting.

The court chose Mayor Terry Rowe to head the committee to look into the courts part in the payment of county indigent accounts at the Sikeston facility. Members chosen for the committee were Hunter Raffety, L.F. LaPlant Jr., Goldie Benson, Leroy Shew and Marshall Jackson.

A right of way dispute was settled by the court this month. The dispute was between Charles Miller and James C. Moreton. The argument was the boundary of their properties and the existence of a small segment of county road left by the state highway department when it took over maintenance.

In other business the court decided to raise the pay of the caretaker of the Oak Grove Cemetery. John Johnson will now receive $600 monthly for upkeep of the cemetery and given an additional $20 for each grave preparation

Sikeston students attend conference

Karen Aufdenberg and David Potashnick from Sikeston High School, attended the Missouri Association of Student Councils training conference June 5-10 at William Woods College in Fulton.

Approximately 360 students elected to serve their junior high or senior high student government met on the campus for "A Preface to the Leadership Year." A staff of 40 leaders provided small group discussions and seminar sessions.

Recreation facilities of the college, including a lake for sailing and tennis courts along with an area set aside for a softball tournament, were used by the students staying on the 160-acre campus.

A talent show was the highlight of the Wednesday evening activities. Achievement night and a closing banquet were held on Thursday night.

The MASC conference was one of 12 scheduled for summer sessions at William Woods. It was the second largest group using the facilities for summer conferences scheduled from June 2 through Aug. 11. Missouri Girls State will bring the largest number of conferees when an estimated 600 Missouri young women will gather at William Woods College.

Study indicates road problems to increase

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — A study prepared for the state's major highway contractors says 86 per cent of Missouri's main roads and streets will wear out in the next 10 years due to increased traffic.

Robert Hunter, chief engineer for the Missouri State Highway Department, said the state would continue maintaining the roads and they would not actually "wear out." But in generally agreeing with the study, Hunter said the state needs about $140 million more than is currently available each year to keep on top of highway maintenance.

The study, conducted by the Road Information Program of Washington, D.C., for Associated General Contractors of Missouri, said that 27,000 of the state's 31,000 miles of major roads will have to be resurfaced or rebuilt by 1987.

The study, confirming figures previously gathered by the Highway Department, also said more than 700 bridges will need repairs or replacement within the same period.

Release of the study comes as an initiative petition campaign is being mounted to increase the state fuel tax from seven to 19 cents a gallon, making it one of the highest in the nation. The additional funds would general another $60 million to $70 million a year for the state road program and provide substantial increases in funds available to counties for bridge repair or replacement.

The drive has been supported by the state Highway Commission, but Gov. Joseph Teasdale has said he strongly opposes any increase in individual taxes while he is in office. The proposal would need voter approval before becoming effective.

The study estimated that the state will have to spend nearly $175 million a year on road and bridge repair to keep highways in good condition over the next 10 years. It said that next year, however, the Highway Department plans to spend only $146 million for major road work, including new construction.

Reagan forces keeping political trail warm

WASHINGTON (AP) — When Republicans start campaigning for president again, the new crop of candidates will find footprints on the major political trade routes. Ronald Reagan is traveling them now.

All he lacks is an election, and Reagan hasn't let that discourage him. He is touring, speaking, writing and broadcasting his brand of Republican conservatism as though the voters would be judging him next week.

It's good for the cause — and the wallet. The standard Reagan speech fee is $5,000, although he does some without charge to raise money for his political organization and, periodically, for the Republican party.

He is making 13 speeches this month. He is doing daily radio broadcasts, weekly newspaper columns. Twice a month his views are featured, under his picture and over his signature, in the newsletter of his own political action committee, Citizens for the Republic.

None of this proves that Reagan will try again for the Republican presidential nomination in 1980. But don't bet against it, despite his age (now 66) and his past defeats in that quest (two).

And, if Reagan doesn't try again himself, the apparatus he and his allies are creating now will be there to serve the conservative of their choosing.

The old Reagan campaign organization is being tended carefully. It is knit together in two ways: through Citizens for the Republic, and through unpublicized, relatively informal meetings of 1976 campaign teams in various parts of the country.

Citizens for the Republic is out front, as the successor to Reagan's presidential campaign committee, and heir to the money he raised but didn't spend in losing the nomination to Gerald R. Ford.

The leftover campaign money comes to about $1.5 million, a healthy political endowment. Something over one-third of the money is supposed to be repaid to the federal Treasury, but nobody has asked for it yet.

Reagan received federal matching funds for his primary election campaign, and the unused portion of the government subsidy has to be repaid. But the Federal Election Commission hasn't sent any bill yet.

"Eventually, I suppose they'll come around and say 'give us our money back,'" said Lyn Nofziger, the veteran Reagan aide who runs the organization. "Then we'll give them their money back."

In the meantime, most of it is invested in U.S. Treasury bills, drawing interest from the government until the government reclaims it.

In little more than four months, Citizens for the Republic has raised about $300,000 in new contributions, to finance its publications and build up a bankroll for political contributions. Its major mission is to work for the election of conservative Republicans, with the emphasis on next year's congressional elections.

There is no better way to build up credits for a presidential campaign than to provide money, advice and big name campaign help in an off-year election.

While it cannot be transformed back into a presidential campaign committee in 1980, it does serve to keep the campaign alive in the interim. Its 63-member steering committee reads like the roster of managers, advisers and major supporters of the 1976 Reagan campaign.

Its mailings and newsletters go to about 190,000 people who were on the Reagan campaign mailing list in 1976. About 20,000 of them have sent back contributions to the new organization.

Reagan came to Washington the other night to raise money for his outfit and two other conservative groups. They took in $50,000 or so at a $100-a-plate dinner.

"We're not a small band of ideologues trying to take over a majority," said Reagan. "In the point of belief, we are a majority ..."

He's still trying to prove it.

State tax revision assured of hearing

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Revision of the state income tax to insure Missouri taxpayers the benefits of recently approved federal income tax cuts has been guaranteed consideration by the full House.

The House Rules Committee, working to salvage Senate-approved measures before the legislature adjourns Wendesday, also moved ahead of nearly three dozen other bills proposed exemption from the sales taxes the steel platforms on which pollution control devices are mounted.

Armco Steel Co. of Kansas City, which manufactures those steel platforms, spent more than $11,000 through eight lobbyists during the first 4½ months of this session in support of that bill as well as others, according to legislative lobbying reports.

But a proposed House amendment to the bill would require all purchasers of tax-exempt goods to file annual reports with the legislature on the total amount of tax-exempt goods they bought in the past year. Those reports would be required of firms purchasing replacement equipment, newspapers, animal breeders and railroads as well as others.

The panel also orderd special consideration for proposed statewide property reassessment and tax credits of up to $250,000 for companies contributing to neighborhood betterment programs.

The income tax revision would insure that Missouri taxpayers will receive $6 million cut in state income taxes in addition to the reduction in federal income taxes authorized by Congress earlier this year.

Tax experts believe the proposal is not necessary to permit the state tax cut, but they recommended passage of the bill to leave no doubt. Some lawmakers feared that because the state income tax is tied to the federal tax system, revision in the federal income tax would mean a state tax increase of $130 million.

The proposal would allow Missourians to increase the standard deduction in calculating taxable income to the higher level approved for figuring federal income tax. For a couple filing a joint return, that would mean an increase in the standard deduction from $2,800 to $3,200, or a state income tax savings of $24.

The reassessment measure would require all property in the state to be re-evaluated and brought up to the assessment level of one-third of its real value by 1981. The assessment is the value assigned to property for tax purposes.

The bill, which cleared the House earlier this year in a similar form, would require assessments to be kept within a reasonable tolerance of the 33.3 per cent level and if they fell out of the range, the state Tax Commission would have the authority to require them to be brought back into line.

The bill also includes safeguards prohibiting local governments or school districts to reap windfall tax increases because of property reassessment

Newest 'Charlie's Angel' shuns sex symbol label

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Cheryl Ladd, recruited as the newest "Charlie's Angel" after the departure of Farrah Fawcett-Majors, says she doesn't want to become a sex symbol.

"I have a lot more going than just that," Cheryl said during a lunch break filming her first episode for the fall season of the hit ABC series. The show was No. 1 in the Nielsen ratings for the week ending June 5.

She laughed, then add "But if people want to say I'm sexy, that's all right."

Despite the departure of Farrah, viewers need not worry, said Cheryl, a natural blonde. "It's going to have more sex than ever because of the violence restrictions. But I'm trying to add humor and reality to my character. She's a very real person. The sex is done naturally. It's not played up. I hope to come across on the screen as a human being."

"Charlie's Angels," as most people know, are three beautiful women detectives who rely more on sex appeal than powers of detection to solve cases just one step above the comic book level. Obviously, it's not clever plots that attract viewers to the show.

Cheryl, 25, married to actor David Ladd and the mother of a 2-year-old daughter, was signed to play Kris Munroe, the younger sister to Farrah's character. Kate Jackson and Jaclyn Smith also star.

Farrah announced last March that she would not return to "Charlie's Angels," which in its first year had helped certify her as a sex symbol of the '70s. She is now involved in a law suit with the producers, Spelling-Goldberg Productions.

Cheryl, who had been a singer with a small band, arrived seven years ago from Huron, S.D., and professes to be still a small town girl at heart. She comes from a closely knit family. "I go home twice a year and some of the family comes here," she said. "We talk once a week on the telephone."

She still sings and says her ambition is to star in a Broadway musical.

She had acted in series roles and TV movies for several years, but said she was unprepared for the sudden fame that descended upon her when she signed for "Charlie's Angels."

"It's big shoes to step into if Farrah doesn't come back," she said. "But it's a steady job and good money and I have enough confidence in myself as an actress. It's all so overwhelming. There are so many demands on me now and my time has become precious.

"One thing I am determined is that it will not take away from the relationship with my husband and daughter. That's the most important thing in my life. Jordan is a terrifically healthy and well-adjusted girl and I want her to stay that way."

Night club fire traced to electrical defect

FORT MITCHELL, Ky. (AP) — An electrical defect in a service space apparently caused the fire that killed 161 people in the Beverly Hills Supper Club on May 28, the state fire marshal said .

Warren Southworth told a news conference that fire began in service space — or crawl space — in the Zebra Room of the club and was fed by combustibles such as ceiling tiles and wood material used for supports.

Southworth said that the fire burned for "considerable time" prior to discovery.

"The ignition sequence led to an intense heat build up within the concealed space which ultimately resulted in an accumulation of smoke and hot gases within the Zebra Room itself," Southworth said.

"It was at this point that the fire was discovered and attempts were made to extinguish it." Southworth said.

The fire marshal said while attempts were still being made to put out the fire in the Zebra Room, "simultaneous ignition" of all combustible material within the room occurred.

The fire continued to build, he said, until it broke out of the Zebra Room through double doors located at the north end of the room and spread rapidly throughout the structure.

Meanwhile, State Police Commissioner Kenneth Brandenburg said investigators had found roulette tables crated in the basement of the burned out building.

Southworth said the club had passed its most recent fire inspection on Jan. 27.

But there are no documents in the files for the years 1972-75. Southworth said he doesn't know whether this indicates that no inspections were made or whether inspection records and correspondence for those years are missing.

The inspection files were released Thursday after they were returned by investigators at Southgate. The most recent entry was a nine-line, handwritten report signed by state inspector John Bramlage.

Two bodies remain unidentified and unclaimed while two women are still listed as missing. Officials have conceded the possibility, while saying it is remote, that the disparity may result from misidentification of bodies.

Study indicates road problems to increase

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — A study prepared for the state's major highway contractors says 86 per cent of Missouri's main roads and streets will wear out in the next 10 years due to increased traffic.

Robert Hunter, chief engineer for the Missouri State Highway Department, said the state would continue maintaining the roads and they would not actually "wear out." But in generally agreeing with the study, Hunter said the state needs about $140 million more than is currently available each year to keep on top of highway maintenance.

The study, conducted by the Road Information Program of Washington, D.C., for Associated General Contractors of Missouri, said that 27,000 of the state's 31,000 miles of major roads will have to be resurfaced or rebuilt by 1987.

The study, confirming figures previously gathered by the Highway Department, also said more than 700 bridges will need repairs or replacement within the same period.

Release of the study comes as an initiative petition campaign is being mounted to increase the state fuel tax from seven to 19 cents a gallon, making it one of the highest in the nation. The additional funds would general another $60 million to $70 million a year for the state road program and provide substantial increases in funds available to counties for bridge repair or replacement.

The drive has been supported by the state Highway Commission, but Gov. Joseph Teasdale has said he strongly opposes any increase in individual taxes while he is in office. The proposal would need voter approval before becoming effective.

The study estimated that the state will have to spend nearly $175 million a year on road and bridge repair to keep highways in good condition over the next 10 years. It said that next year, however, the Highway Department plans to spend only $146 million for major road work, including new construction.

Reagan forces keeping political trail warm

WASHINGTON (AP) — When Republicans start campaigning for president again, the new crop of candidates will find footprints on the major political trade routes. Ronald Reagan is traveling them now.

All he lacks is an election, and Reagan hasn't let that discourage him. He is touring, speaking, writing and broadcasting his brand of Republican conservatism as though the voters would be judging him next week.

It's good for the cause — and the wallet. The standard Reagan speech fee is $5,000, although he does some without charge to raise money for his political organization and, periodically, for the Republican party.

He is making 13 speeches this month. He is doing daily radio broadcasts, weekly newspaper columns. Twice a month his views are featured, under his picture and over his signature, in the newsletter of his own political action committee, Citizens for the Republic.

None of this proves that Reagan will try again for the Republican presidential nomination in 1980. But don't bet against it, despite his age (now 66) and his past defeats in that quest (two).

And, if Reagan doesn't try again himself, the apparatus he and his allies are creating now will be there to serve the conservative of their choosing.

The old Reagan campaign organization is being tended carefully. It is knit together in two ways: through Citizens for the Republic, and through unpublicized, relatively informal meetings of 1976 campaign teams in various parts of the country.

Citizens for the Republic is out front, as the successor to Reagan's presidential campaign committee, and heir to the money he raised but didn't spend in losing the nomination to Gerald R. Ford.

The leftover campaign money comes to about $1.5 million, a healthy political endowment. Something over one-third of the money is supposed to be repaid to the federal Treasury, but nobody has asked for it yet.

Reagan received federal matching funds for his primary election campaign, and the unused portion of the government subsidy has to be repaid. But the Federal Election Commission hasn't sent any bill yet.

"Eventually, I suppose they'll come around and say 'give us our money back,'" said Lyn Nofziger, the veteran Reagan aide who runs the organization. "Then we'll give them their money back."

In the meantime, most of it is invested in U.S. Treasury bills, drawing interest from the government until the government reclaims it.

In little more than four months, Citizens for the Republic has raised about $300,000 in new contributions, to finance its publications and build up a bankroll for political contributions. Its major mission is to work for the election of conservative Republicans, with the emphasis on next year's congressional elections.

There is no better way to build up credits for a presidential campaign than to provide money, advice and big name campaign help in an off-year election.

While it cannot be transformed back into a presidential campaign committee in 1980, it does serve to keep the campaign alive in the interim. Its 63-member steering committee reads like the roster of managers, advisers and major supporters of the 1976 Reagan campaign.

Its mailings and newsletters go to about 190,000 people who were on the Reagan campaign mailing list in 1976. About 20,000 of them have sent back contributions to the new organization.

Reagan came to Washington the other night to raise money for his outfit and two other conservative groups. They took in $50,000 or so at a $100-a-plate dinner.

"We're not a small band of ideologues trying to take over a majority," said Reagan. "In the point of belief, we are a majority ..."

He's still trying to prove it.

State tax revision assured of hearing

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Revision of the state income tax to insure Missouri taxpayers the benefits of recently approved federal income tax cuts has been guaranteed consideration by the full House.

The House Rules Committee, working to salvage Senate-approved measures before the legislature adjourns Wendesday, also moved ahead of nearly three dozen other bills proposed exemption from the sales taxes the steel platforms on which pollution control devices are mounted.

Armco Steel Co. of Kansas City, which manufactures those steel platforms, spent more than $11,000 through eight lobbyists during the first 4½ months of this session in support of that bill as well as others, according to legislative lobbying reports.

But a proposed House amendment to the bill would require all purchasers of tax-exempt goods to file annual reports with the legislature on the total amount of tax-exempt goods they bought in the past year. Those reports would be required of firms purchasing replacement equipment, newspapers, animal breeders and railroads as well as others.

The panel also orderd special consideration for proposed statewide property reassessment and tax credits of up to $250,000 for companies contributing to neighborhood betterment programs.

The income tax revision would insure that Missouri taxpayers will receive $6 million cut in state income taxes in addition to the reduction in federal income taxes authorized by Congress earlier this year.

Tax experts believe the proposal is not necessary to permit the state tax cut, but they recommended passage of the bill to leave no doubt. Some lawmakers feared that because the state income tax is tied to the federal tax system, revision in the federal income tax would mean a state tax increase of $130 million.

The proposal would allow Missourians to increase the standard deduction in calculating taxable income to the higher level approved for figuring federal income tax. For a couple filing a joint return, that would mean an increase in the standard deduction from $2,800 to $3,200, or a state income tax savings of $24.

The reassessment measure would require all property in the state to be re-evaluated and brought up to the assessment level of one-third of its real value by 1981. The assessment is the value assigned to property for tax purposes.

The bill, which cleared the House earlier this year in a similar form, would require assessments to be kept within a reasonable tolerance of the 33.3 per cent level and if they fell out of the range, the state Tax Commission would have the authority to require them to be brought back into line.

The bill also includes safeguards prohibiting local governments or school districts to reap windfall tax increases because of property reassessment

Southworth said the club had passed its most recent fire inspection on Jan. 27.

But there are no documents in the files for the years 1972-75. Southworth said he doesn't know whether this indicates that no inspections were made or whether inspection records and correspondence for those years are missing.

PROPOSAL

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Bob Smythe of Tucson, Ariz., wanted to propose to a girl whom he used to know in Detroit, but he didn't know where to find her. He lost contact with her in 1959 when she moved to Ohio.

So Smythe, a 59-year-old widower, called a Columbus, Ohio, newspaper and asked for its help. The paper ran a story about his predicament.

A couple of days later, Smythe got a long-distance call from the girl, Patsy Drouillard, now Patsy Roach, a 45-year-old divorcee, who had learned of the story.

insensitive" and said his organization would "fight any implication ... to do away with the VA hospitals."

The 311-page report by a committee of the Academy's National Research Council did not recommend abolishing the VA hospital system but integrating it more closely with regular community facilities.

"I don't think veterans hospitals have to be phased out of existence," Dr. Saul J. Farber of New York University Medical School, study chairman, told a briefing. "But in the long run they should be public hospitals."

The report said the federal government spent $40 billion on health care in 1976, of which $4 billion was on the VA to provide care for three million veterans, less than 30 per cent of whom have service-related disabilities.

Among other things, the study concluded:

—Many patients admitted to VA hospitals do not require hospitalization and many are kept as inpatients much longer than medically necessary or desirable.

—The VA is responsible for substantially more long-term patients than can be accommodated in the 27,000 beds designated for long-term care. There were 44,500 long-term patients in 1975 in VA-operated facilities, many taking up more expensive beds set aside for surgery and acute illness.

—The number of veterans requiring long-term care and geriatric services will double in the next 10 years and almost triple in 20 years. The report recommended that low-use VA hospitals be closed or converted to long-term care facilities, and that resources be redistributed to spend more on care for the aged.

—VA outpatient services are understaffed, ineffectively managed and not well organized. More resources should be rechanneled to outpatient services to provide better continuity of care and to cut hospitalization, the study said.

Governor signs grain bill law

JEFFERSON CITY— Gov. Joseph P. Teasdale last week signed into law a bill designed to protect persons storing grain in Missouri from fraudulent warehousing practices. Teasdale said:

"This law is an important step in protecting our state's grain producers from financial losses, and thus will benefit the entire business community."

Under the law, all Missouri grain warehouses must be examined at least once annually by the Missouri Department of Agriculture and are required to have additional bonding. Unlicensed warehouses suspected of storing grain may be investigated by the agriculture department. Persons convicted of violating record keeping sections could be charged with felony and sentenced up to five years in prison and fined up to $50,000.

Previous grain warehouseing laws have been unable to stop fraudulent operators from doing business in the state, and the result has been a rising incidence of financial losses by farmers who unknowingly store their grain with insolvent warehouses. The new statute monitors the financial stability of grain warehouses in Missouri by requiring all persons providing grain storage services for a fee to be regularly licensed, audited and bonded by the issouri Department of Agriculture.

Proponents cite advantages of the new law, a revision of the Missouri Grain Warehouse Law, enacted in 1941 and revised in 1971. Perhaps most importantly, it defines exactly who must be licensed as a grain warehouseman in Missouri. Previous statutes did not specify who was to be licensed, or who the Missouri Department of Agriculture could examine.

The new law also allows the agriculture department to act immediately if deceit is found in warehouse records. Previous statutes contained loopholes which prevented state officials from taking prompt action, giving unscrupulous warehouse operators time to cover their shortages. The new law also clarifies the agriculture department's authority to investigate unlicensed warehouses suspected of storing grain.

Commandos free hostages

ASSEN, The Netherlands (AP) — Surviving hostages held tearful reunions with families and underwent medical tests Saturday after Dutch commandos freed them in predawn raids on a train and school, ending a 20-day siege by South Moluccan terrorists.

Two hostages — a 19-year-old woman and 40-year-old man — were killed along with six of their nine captors when Dutch troops stormed the train just before dawn. Twelve persons were injured — one terrorist, two soldiers and nine hostages.

Officials said Miss J. M. O. Monsjou of Groningen and M. Van Baarsel of Elst were shot when they jumped to their feet during the attack, disregarding soldiers' orders, shouted over loudspeakers, to stay down. There were no casualties in the school.

The Dutch government, which sought to end the sieges through negotiation and psychological pressure, said it had no choice at the end but to use force to free the hostages.

A hospital spokesman in Groningen said the 53 former hostages were generally in good shape, and most returned home after physical and psychological examinations by a specially assembled medical team, refusing an offer to remain in the hospital for 24 hours.

Queen reviews trooping

LONDON (AP) — Riding sidesaddle under a drenching rain, Queen Elizabeth II reviewed the Trooping of the Color Saturday, taking the salute of her subjects in the third and final Silver Jubilee spectacular marking the 25th year of her rise to the throne.

Soaked by the sudden downpour, the Queen sat ramrod straight as thousands of onlookers huddled beneath umbrellas to watch the review, Britain's official celebration of the Queen's 51st birthday.

Her actual birthday is April 21, but tradition set the official party on the second Saturday in June.

Drums and trumpets heralded her approach, preceded by Princess Margaret, Queen Elizabeth the Queen Mother, and Princess Anne and her husband Capt. Mark Phillips, who rode in open carriages.

The fastest wind ever recorded was 231 miles an hour on New Hampshire's Mount Washington in 1934.

A couple of days later, Smythe got a long-distance call from the girl, Patsy Drouillard, now Patsy Roach, a 45-year-old divorcee, who had learned of the story.

insensitive" and said his organization would "fight any implication ... to do away with the VA hospitals."

The 311-page report by a committee of the Academy's National Research Council did not recommend abolishing the VA hospital system but integrating it more closely with regular community facilities.

"I don't think veterans hospitals have to be phased out of existence," Dr. Saul J. Farber of New York University Medical School, study chairman, told a briefing. "But in the long run they should be public hospitals."

The report said the federal government spent $40 billion on health care in 1976, of which $4 billion was on the VA to provide care for three million veterans, less than 30 per cent of whom have service-related disabilities.

Among other things, the study concluded:

—Many patients admitted to VA hospitals do not require hospitalization and many are kept as inpatients much longer than medically necessary or desirable.

—The VA is responsible for substantially more long-term patients than can be accommodated in the 27,000 beds designated for long-term care. There were 44,500 long-term patients in 1975 in VA-operated facilities, many taking up more expensive beds set aside for surgery and acute illness.

—The number of veterans requiring long-term care and geriatric services will double in the next 10 years and almost triple in 20 years. The report recommended that low-use VA hospitals be closed or converted to long-term care facilities, and that resources be redistributed to spend more on care for the aged.

—VA outpatient services are understaffed, ineffectively managed and not well organized. More resources should be rechanneled to outpatient services to provide better continuity of care and to cut hospitalization, the study said.

Governor signs grain bill law

JEFFERSON CITY— Gov. Joseph P. Teasdale last week signed into law a bill designed to protect persons storing grain in Missouri from fraudulent warehousing practices. Teasdale said:

"This law is an important step in protecting our state's grain producers from financial losses, and thus will benefit the entire business community."

Under the law, all Missouri grain warehouses must be examined at least once annually by the Missouri Department of Agriculture and are required to have additional bonding. Unlicensed warehouses suspected of storing grain may be investigated by the agriculture department. Persons convicted of violating record keeping sections could be charged with felony and sentenced up to five years in prison and fined up to $50,000.

Previous grain warehouseing laws have been unable to stop fraudulent operators from doing business in the state, and the result has been a rising incidence of financial losses by farmers who unknowingly store their grain with insolvent warehouses. The new statute monitors the financial stability of grain warehouses in Missouri by requiring all persons providing grain storage services for a fee to be regularly licensed, audited and bonded by the issouri Department of Agriculture.

Proponents cite advantages of the new law, a revision of the Missouri Grain Warehouse Law, enacted in 1941 and revised in 1971. Perhaps most importantly, it defines exactly who must be licensed as a grain warehouseman in Missouri. Previous statutes did not specify who was to be licensed, or who the Missouri Department of Agriculture could examine.

The new law also allows the agriculture department to act immediately if deceit is found in warehouse records. Previous statutes contained loopholes which prevented state officials from taking prompt action, giving unscrupulous warehouse operators time to cover their shortages. The new law also clarifies the agriculture department's authority to investigate unlicensed warehouses suspected of storing grain.

Agri-Business

The Four Horsemen Stables

In February, four Sikeston men, Scott County Sheriff William F. "Bill" Ferrell, Bob Kindle, Jim Clay and Eddie Troup, got together to form the Four Horsemen stables, located at Routes H and HH, north of Miner. The facility has both indoor and outdoor arenas and stabling facilities for about 30 horses. A wide variety of services are to be offered at the stables for the horseman including horse shows, auctions, equipment sales, and horse breaking, training and riding by manager, CharlieNunn.

Horses are big business

A $15 billion industry isn't hay, by any means. That's how much officials of the American Horse Council (AHC), Washington, D.C., say 'ole dobbin' is contributing to the nation's economy.

AHC estimates there are 8.5 million horses in the country and their owners will spend a whopping $7 billion dollars this year for feed, equipment, tack, veterinary supplies, services and related goods on their equine friends. In addition, equine aficionados have another $8 billion tied up in horse flesh, land and buildings devoted to their horses.

In other words, the United States is horse country, and horses are big business. Just how big a business and how many horses are kept in this country is not really known. The horse industry, through AHC, has asked the federal government for funds to conduct a horse census. One think is certain. Not since the dayswhen horses pulled the plows of America's farmers has there been such interest in horses.

Few horses are pulling plows any more, so why the horse boom?

The reason is recreation. Of the 3.2 million horse owners, over 80 per cent of them list recreation and pleasure as their primary reason for horse ownership.

Further, the U.S. Extension Service, which keeps tabs on the nation's 4-H program, reports horse projects among 4-H members are more popular than beef cattle and swine combined, with 320,000 4-H members participating. This compares to only 30,000 horse projects in 1960.

The largest horse breed association, in terms of horses registered and active breeders, is the American Quarter Horse Association (AQHA), headquartered in Amarillo, Texas. Since its formation in 1940, AQHA has registered 1.25 million Quarter Horses, nearly double the size of the next largest registry. AQHA registered 100,959 foals in 1976, an all-time high. In addition, 168,000 animals were sold to new owners, also a new record. More than 200 people are employed to handle the daily activities of AQHA.

"Horses are definitely a family recreational activity," notes Ronald Blackwell, Executive Secretary of AQHA. A recent study of AQHA's 84,000 members revealed that for each membership, two other members of the family also participated in Quarter Horse activities.

"The most popular family activity among our members is riding for pleasure, with a 69 percent response," Blackwell said.

The horse continues to remain on the ranches of the Southwest where the cowboy depends on the horse to accomplish his daily ranch work. However, the Quarter Horse is also moving to the city, as according to AQHA's survey, 34 percent of those owning Quarter Horses live in a city or suburban area. Many cities are planning trails and bridle paths in future parks and recreation facilities. Thus, the trend of increased suburban horse ownership is expected to continue.

American-bred horses are in much demand outside the U.S. as well. Value of exports of horses out-totaled imports for 1974 and 1975 by $36 million. Despite the breed's name, a total of 49,999 American Quarter Horses are owned by residents of 57 foreign countries.

England, West Germany, and Italy appear to be the hotbeds of Quarter Horse activity abroad, each having recently formed their own Quarter Horse associations. Recently, 26 Quarter Horses were flown from Houston to new owners in West Germany where they will be used for western riding.

Next to riding for pleasure, showing Quarter Horses is the most popular activity of their owners. During 1976, 1,997 Quarter Horse shows were held in the U.S. and Canada and over 601,000 entries participated. Twenty events are offered, ranging from the popular Western Pleasure, where the horse is judged on how well it gives a pleasurable ride, to the highly skilled calf roping, the still-practiced art of the ranch cowboy. Amateur-rider events and classes for youngsters 18 and under are also held.

Racing is another fast growing sport for the Quarter Horse owner. The Quarter Horse, whose name is derived from the animal's overwhelming speed up to a quarter of a mile, competes in the world's richest horse race, the $1 million All American Futurity, held each Labor Day at Ruidoso Downs, New Mexico. The winner of the race receives $330,000. Horse racing has been the country's number one spectator sport for 24 consecutive years, and due to parimutual wagering in the 30 states where it is legalized, those states received a record $580 million for their coffers in 1975 from horse racing.

So, the horse, once cast aside in lieu of machines and technology, has adapted to different roles in today's society. He is now a source of recreation; an escape from the technology that once replaced him. Somewhat ironic, perhaps, but its a role that's surely here to stay.

Irrigation system

The Valley, center pivot irrigation system, was installed on the Bob Frazier Farm, near Wyatt, Saturday, by the Mid Valley Irrigation Co., of Charleston. The system is powered by a Cummins Diesel, from Cummins Diesel of Sikeston.

Co-ops need internal 'adjudication' Mizzou economist says

COLUMBIA— Farmers' cooperatives need a "system of appeal and adjudication' separate from courts built into the cooperative structure, a University of Missouri-Columbia agricultural economist said Monday (June 6) before a workshop on cooperatives meeting here.

Harold Breimyer, Perry Professor of Agricultural Economics at UMC, said, "Unless the rules of the game are well chosen and an appeal system proves restraining, power can be placed in the wrong hands and abused." He spoke at the Workshop on Agricultural Cooperatives and the Public Interest, focusing on the Capper-Volstead Act of 1922.

"Cooperatives are in trouble–acceptability trouble," he said, as some businessmen complain that, while co-ops are made distinct from corporations and largely excmpt from anti-trust action under Capper-Volstead, some cooperatives today are as big and powerful, and act in the same ways as the nation's largest corporations.

"Evidence is all about us that cooperative marketing of farm products, afixture since the 1920's, is under challenge."

Even though cooperatives may be getting more "flack" than they deserve, Breimyer noted, a more exact definition of cooperatives' power is needed. "An appeal system should go with it. Laws affecting cooperatives should provide an internal appeals systems to settle disputes, with courts as a last resort."

This system would be "one of substantial but not unlimited aggregations of power, and also of an explicit participation by government primarily to set the rules and, where necessary, to declare boundaries," Breimyer said.

"If this is a proper model for farmer cooperatives, it would be timely to modify the law appropriately, in its letter but especially in its spirit."

Breimyer drew a dichotomy between two systems of marketing: cooperative structure of many producers joining forces, with diffused power and controls on the conduct of members; and a centralized or "authoritarian" marketing structure.

To define the first system, "associationism."

"It is a system wherein economic interest groups of various sizes -- none really small -- mill about in all sorts of coalitions but also in all kinds of confrontations. The system operates under a complex set of rules designed to keep the various groups in something close to countervailing equity rather than allosing any one to dominate. The situation is not very orderly and never truly secure."

The second system, "is the pure version of corporate administrative structure. It is essentially authoritarian. This is the structure of private and public monopoly or any entrenched economic power."

Breimyer said that the farmers of the Capper-Volstead Act, an outgrowth of the progressive movement early in the century, had in mind the "associationism" view and not the "authoritarian" structure.

Yet, Capper-Volstead includes a provision which, in effect, creates a tendency toward monopolistic control of farm marketing.

Section two of the act makes the U.S. Secretary of Agriculture solely responsible for policing cooperatives when he "has reason to believe that a Capper-Volstead cooperative monopolizes or restrains trade to such an extent that it unduly enhances the price of an agricultural product," according to the law.

This provision allowing so much central authority is "inconsistent with the language and spirit of the rest of the Act, voluntary associationism."

Section two has never been enforced, Breimyer said. Secretaries of Agriculture have "initiated few investigations and never found prices to be enhanced unduly."

"That section has served only to mislead the more aggressive cooperative leaders, interpreting section two as giving them authority to do whatever they wished short of being reversed by one man." Likewise, if the Secretary of Agriculture wers to intervene in the case of abause, this would also be centralizing marketing power out of the "spirit" of Capper-Volstead.

Breimyer quoted Judge Lewis Morgan of the U.S. Court of Appeals, Fifth Circuit, to support the view that Capper-Volstead was designed to promote diffused power in agricultural marketing.

Congress "Congress meant (in Capper-Volstead) to improve the bargaining position of farmers vis-a-vis corporate middlemen in order to increase farm income and, importantly, to stop the rise of tenancy and the migration of farm families to the cities," Judge Morgan said in a decision in April.

While the Act gave some statutory protections to cooperatives not afforded to corporations, "The business practices of cooperatives are subject to scrutiny just as are those of private enterprise."

Breimyer noted that "cooperative leadership would be wiser not to seek every potential opportunity to gain economic power."

He also endorsed the marketing order device–as is used by milk cooperatives–as an appropriate means of maintaining associationism in agricultural marketing.

Further, Breimyer put cooperatives into perspective with the U.S. economy.

"It seems to me that the hubbub about farmer marketing cooperatives and the Capper-Volstead Act is only symptomatic of a morass into which the whole economy has drifted. Not just cooperatives, but much of the business world has taken on a complexion that we know neither how to characterize or how to manage.

"Evidence can be cited indicating that the economy as a whole is taking on the characteristics of the second organizational system (central administration)."

Breimyer also said cooperative leaders "have grounds for complaining that tighter rules are now being applied to farm cooperatives than to much of corporate business. One cause may be that the existence of Capper-Volstead gives anti-trust issues a focus relative to cooperatives that they no longer have in automobiles or oil or pharmaceuticals."

Hogan picked for Chamber Ag Council

JEFFERSON CITY— Lloyd Hogan of East Prairie was recently appointed to serve on the Agribusiness Council Administrative Committee of the Missouri Chamber of Commerce. Hogan's appointment was announced by Robert C. Rhoades, Missouri Chamber of Commerce president.

The Agribusiness Council Administrative Committee reviews concerns and items of interest and ii importance to the agri-industry complex of Missouri. The committee also sets forth policy guidelines for the newly expanded agribusiness department of the Missouri Chamber.

Hogan, manager of Hogan's Farm Supply, Inc. of East Prairie, also serves as a member of the East Prairie Chamber of Commerce; the Bootheel Regional Planning Commission; second vice president of Missouri Ag Industries Council; and chairman of industrial development, East Prairie Community Betterment.

In recognition of his community service, Hogan was honored as 'Man of the Year' in 1973 by the East Prairie Chamber of Commerce, and in 1972 was presented the Missouri Community Betterment Leadership Citation.

Hogan and his wife, Mary, are active members of the First Baptist Church of East Prairie. They have three children and live at 707 South Martin St.

Missouri Research May Advance Birth Control, Animal Fertility

Missouri scientists have perfected a procedure which will help them better understand reproduction in humans and animals.

Ultimately, it could lead to a birth control pill for men (or a better one for women) and reduce costly infertility problems among farm animals.

The procedure prevents activation of a key sperm-enzyme required for fertilization. It helps scientists manipulate and study sperm and fertilization in controlled test tube experiments.

The procedure was developed by Warren Zahler, University of Missouri-Columbia biochemist, with help from Kenneth Polakoski and John Paulson of the Washington University School of Medicine in St. Louis. Their procedure involved acrosin, an enzyme that has to be activated during sperm capacitation. Capacitation, which occurs in the female tract, is a process which allows sperm to tunnel through the layer around the egg and fertilize it.

Depending on the species, sperm have to spend 30 minutes to a few hours inside the tract before they are capacitated. As a result, some animals are not bred because the sperm isn't ready when the egg is ready.

By studying this enzyme, Zahler and his colleagues hope to develop a procedure to manipulate acrosin so sperm are more active immediately after insemination and, therefore, more capable of fertilization.

"Or we might find some enzyme inhibitor which would keep the sperm from being fertile," says Zahler. "This would give us a male or female 'pill' without harmful side effects."

Their findings could also improve semen storage, especially a problem in the hog industry.

"We hope to learn how to protect the acrosome, the area at the head of the sperm which contains capacitation enzymes," Zahler says. "Protection of the acrosome would help keep sperm stable in storage. The sperm wouldn't be activated until insemination.

"Right now, we can incubate sperm in the test tube to capacitate them. Then we can add the inhibitor, benzamidine, so we can stop capacitation at different stages. That way we can measure the enzymes that cause capacitation and find out at what point sperm are activated and ready to fertilize the egg."

Zahler is currently working with laboratory animals like the rat and guinea pig but eventually hopes to switch to farm animals to help solve infertility problems now costing farmers millions of dollars each year.

In 1901, President Theodore Roosevelt said: "Speak softly and carry a big stick and you will go far."

Grain dealer regulation bills face Senate battle

By STEVE ROSEN
Missouri Press News

JEFFERSON CITY — Bills to protect farmers from being bilked by financially insolvent grain dealers and warehouse operators are headed for battles in the Missouri Senate.

Two different bills comprise the protection plan for farmers, but legislators and state officials agree it is hard to tell whether both bills will be passed this session. They say some form of legislation to prevent farmers from being duped needs quick approval.

Recent reports of grain stealing in Randolph County, financial difficulties at a Moberly elevator and other similar incidents have spurred the need for tough legislation.

A bill introduced by Rep. Robert Kaye, R-Chillicothe, which would require the state Department of Agriculture to license and regulate grain dealers, is awaiting floor action in the Senate. Kaye expects the bill, already approved by the House and passed by the Senate Agriculture Committee, to be debated on the Senate floor within the next three weeks.

Additional protection for grain producers in the form of a revision of the state's grain warehouse law is awaiting Senate approval before being sent to the House. The bill, sponsored by Sen. Nelson Tinnin, D-Hornersville, would allow the Department of Agriculture greater access to grain warehouse financial conditions.

Both bills would offer a comprehensive protection plan for farmers," Tinnin said. "I believe there is enough protection for farmers in my bill." Tinnin, Chairman of the Senate Agriculture Committee, voted against Kaye's bill in the committee.

Although Kaye's bill has reached the Senate with little opposition, state officials believe there are problems with the legislation. The bill does not have the approval of the Department of Agriculture.

Specifically, the bill stipulates every person or company not now regulated and bonded by state and federal agencies but who buy grain for resale must apply for a license to do business.

"The bill is an effort to supervise truckers buying grain for resale as well as small elevator operators buying grain for resale," Kaye said. The bill would not regulate persons buying grain for their own consumption.

"We agree with the intent of the bill, but we are not sure whether the people who need to be covered are the ones who would be covered under the bill," said Tom Hopkins, state warehouse coordinator for the Department of Agriculture.

Because Kaye's bill does not apply to persons already licensed and bonded under grain warehouse laws, Hopkins believes the legislation is "leaving out the individuals where the most trouble occurs." Warehousemen buy and store grain and if warehousemen are not bonded, he said, "this leaves a void in the legislation."

Enforcement of the law on grain dealers, which would be left to the state Department of Agriculture, is another problem. "I think the bill would encourage more dishonesty because there is not a stiff penalty," said James Sprake, newly-appointed deputy director of the agriculture department. A disreputable grain dealer could be found guilty only of a misdemeanor.

"We'd be spending more time trying to catch the person rather than preventing the problem," he said.

"I'm hopeful the bill will be passed by the Senate," Kaye said. "I don't see any real problems with it. I think my intent is clear."

Legislation given the best chance of passing this session is Tinnin's grain warehouse law revision. Already passed by the Senate, the bill requires warehousemen to keep better financial records and would also increase the amount of surety bonding.

Because of a lack of statutory authority under the present law, only records related to stored grain are open for review. "A person only has to give us records he wants you to see," Hopkins said. The new law makes it a felony for an operator to present false records to the state.

The proposal would license an additional 280 warehouses not covered under the law. Presently, about 240 warehouses are licensed by the state.

The grain warehouse business is a tremendous cash flow operation, Hopkins said, and some warehouse employes have had financial difficulties. Other operators have made poor investments in the futures market, he said.

Revising the present grain warehouse law should offer a great deal of protection for the farmer, Sparke said. "What I think we could live with is Tinnin's bill to be activated as soon as possible."

Planting cotton in warm soil has paid dividends

Bloomfield - The cotton crop got off to the best start throughout Stoddard County and the Missouri Bootheel this spring that I can remember seeing in a number of years. Most of the cotton is up to a good stand, and the crop has made good growth up until the present time.

Perhaps the greatest single reason for this is the fact that farmers waited until the soil had warmed up pretty well to plant their cotton. This was probably done for several reasons including the scarcity of good seed of adapted varieties and weather conditions around planting time, but I like to think that the primary reason is that farmers realize the importance of planting cotton in a warm soil.

We recommend waiting until the soil temperature is 68-70 degrees F. to plant cotton. Results of research conducted at the University of Missouri Delta Center at Portageville emphasizes the importance of doing so. Where cotton was planted in a warm soil of 70-85 F degrees, the stand survival was 40 percent compared to a survival rate of only nine percent where cotton was planted in a cold soil of 60-70 F degrees. A fungicidal soil treatment improved the situation, but the stand survival varied from 54 percent in the warm soil to 24 percent in the cold soil.

Incidentally, 15 days were required for the cotton to come up in the cold soil compared to only six days required in a warm soil. This simply means that more time is allowed for the cottonseed to be attacked by various seedling disease organisms when cotton is planted in a cold soil.

Seedling diseases take a heavy toll of cotton yields and profits almost every year and especially during late, cold, wet spring seasons such as we have experienced too often during recent years. Fungus or bacterial disease organisms attack the cotton seed before germination and young seedling plants either before or after they comp up.

Seed may be decayed before germination, and infected seedling plants that come up are pale and slow-growing and often die within a few days. Plants that survive the initial damage are more susceptible to other diseases and drouth than are normal plants. The root system of affected plants is usually deformed to the extent that the ability of plants to pick up the necessary moisture and nutrients from the soil is limited throughout the life of the crop.

Now, what does all this mean insofar as the.hime of .lanting is concerned? Cotton planted too early in a cold soil often has to be replanted. Replanting cotton is a costly proposition and your second crop of cotton--assuming you get a stand--is always late at best.

Even is you should happen to have the luck to get an acceptable stand, your cotton could easily be delayed sufficiently to offset the time gained by early planting. And, as I have indicated, a severe case of seedling disease often affects the cotton adversely throughout the season.

Grain dealer regulation bills face Senate battle

By STEVE ROSEN
Missouri Press News

JEFFERSON CITY — Bills to protect farmers from being bilked by financially insolvent grain dealers and warehouse operators are headed for battles in the Missouri Senate.

Two different bills comprise the protection plan for farmers, but legislators and state officials agree it is hard to tell whether both bills will be passed this session. They say some form of legislation to prevent farmers from being duped needs quick approval.

Recent reports of grain stealing in Randolph County, financial difficulties at a Moberly elevator and other similar incidents have spurred the need for tough legislation.

A bill introduced by Rep. Robert Kaye, R-Chillicothe, which would require the state Department of Agriculture to license and regulate grain dealers, is awaiting floor action in the Senate. Kaye expects the bill, already approved by the House and passed by the Senate Agriculture Committee, to be debated on the Senate floor within the next three weeks.

Additional protection for grain producers in the form of a revision of the state's grain warehouse law is awaiting Senate approval before being sent to the House. The bill, sponsored by Sen. Nelson Tinnin, D-Hornersville, would allow the Department of Agriculture greater access to grain warehouse financial conditions.

Both bills would offer a comprehensive protection plan for farmers," Tinnin said. "I believe there is enough protection for farmers in my bill." Tinnin, Chairman of the Senate Agriculture Committee, voted against Kaye's bill in the committee.

Although Kaye's bill has reached the Senate with little opposition, state officials believe there are problems with the legislation. The bill does not have the approval of the Department of Agriculture.

Specifically, the bill stipulates every person or company not now regulated and bonded by state and federal agencies but who buy grain for resale must apply for a license to do business.

"The bill is an effort to supervise truckers buying grain for resale as well as small elevator operators buying grain for resale," Kaye said. The bill would not regulate persons buying grain for their own consumption.

"We agree with the intent of the bill, but we are not sure whether the people who need to be covered are the ones who would be covered under the bill," said Tom Hopkins, state warehouse coordinator for the Department of Agriculture.

Because Kaye's bill does not apply to persons already licensed and bonded under grain warehouse laws, Hopkins believes the legislation is "leaving out the individuals where the most trouble occurs." Warehousemen buy and store grain and if warehousemen are not bonded, he said, "this leaves a void in the legislation."

Enforcement of the law on grain dealers, which would be left to the state Department of Agriculture, is another problem. "I think the bill would encourage more dishonesty because there is not a stiff penalty," said James Sprake, newly-appointed deputy director of the agriculture department. A disreputable grain dealer could be found guilty only of a misdemeanor.

"We'd be spending more time trying to catch the person rather than preventing the problem," he said.

"I'm hopeful the bill will be passed by the Senate," Kaye said. "I don't see any real problems with it. I think my intent is clear."

Legislation given the best chance of passing this session is Tinnin's grain warehouse law revision. Already passed by the Senate, the bill requires warehousemen to keep better financial records and would also increase the amount of surety bonding.

Because of a lack of statutory authority under the present law, only records related to stored grain are open for review. "A person only has to give us records he wants you to see," Hopkins said. The new law makes it a felony for an operator to present false records to the state.

The proposal would license an additional 280 warehouses not covered under the law. Presently, about 240 warehouses are licensed by the state.

The grain warehouse business is a tremendous cash flow operation, Hopkins said, and some warehouse employes have had financial difficulties. Other operators have made poor investments in the futures market, he said.

Revising the present grain warehouse law should offer a great deal of protection for the farmer, Sparke said. "What I think we could live with is Tinnin's bill to be activated as soon as possible."

Planting cotton in warm soil has paid dividends

Bloomfield - The cotton crop got off to the best start throughout Stoddard County and the Missouri Bootheel this spring that I can remember seeing in a number of years. Most of the cotton is up to a good stand, and the crop has made good growth up until the present time.

Perhaps the greatest single reason for this is the fact that farmers waited until the soil had warmed up pretty well to plant their cotton. This was probably done for several reasons including the scarcity of good seed of adapted varieties and weather conditions around planting time, but I like to think that the primary reason is that farmers realize the importance of planting cotton in a warm soil.

We recommend waiting until the soil temperature is 68-70 degrees F. to plant cotton. Results of research conducted at the University of Missouri Delta Center at Portageville emphasizes the importance of doing so. Where cotton was planted in a warm soil of 70-85 F degrees, the stand survival was 40 percent compared to a survival rate of only nine percent where cotton was planted in a cold soil of 60-70 F degrees. A fungicidal soil treatment improved the situation, but the stand survival varied from 54 percent in the warm soil to 24 percent in the cold soil.

Incidentally, 15 days were required for the cotton to come up in the cold soil compared to only six days required in a warm soil. This simply means that more time is allowed for the cottonseed to be attacked by various seedling disease organisms when cotton is planted in a cold soil.

Seedling diseases take a heavy toll of cotton yields and profits almost every year and especially during late, cold, wet spring seasons such as we have experienced too often during recent years. Fungus or bacterial disease organisms attack the cotton seed before germination and young seedling plants either before or after they comp up.

Seed may be decayed before germination, and infected seedling plants that come up are pale and slow-growing and often die within a few days. Plants that survive the initial damage are more susceptible to other diseases and drouth than are normal plants. The root system of affected plants is usually deformed to the extent that the ability of plants to pick up the necessary moisture and nutrients from the soil is limited throughout the life of the crop.

Now, what does all this mean insofar as the hime of lanting is concerned? Cotton planted too early in a cold soil often has to be replanted. Replanting cotton is a costly proposition and your second crop of cotton--assuming you get a stand--is always late at best.

Even is you should happen to have the luck to get an acceptable stand, your cotton could easily be delayed sufficiently to offset the time gained by early planting. And, as I have indicated, a severe case of seedling disease often affects the cotton adversely throughout the season.

A TAXING TASK

Never in the course of human taxation have so many people been put to so much trouble for so little purpose.

Each year, American businesses spend millions of dollars and devote millions of manhours to assembling tons of documents which, by law, they must submit to the Internal Revenue Service. The documents detail the wages, dividends, interest and other payments they have made to individuals and other corporations.

Contrary to the general belief that the all-seeing computers of the IRS then crosscheck these records against individual and corporate tax returns,60 per cent of the documents regarding individuals and 100 per cent of those regarding corporations are routinely destroyed without anybody even looking at them.

This year, the IRS will shred, pulverize and burn about 250 million unexamined documents submitted by businesses to assist the service in detecting cheating, says the Wall Street Journal. The IRS is, in fact, buying 11 new pulverizing machines, costing $80,000 each, to help destroy the documents.

It is not that the tax collectors place all that much trust in the honesty of the American taxpayer. They are simply overwhelmed. But if this revelation tempts any indivíual to fudge a bit in reporting his sources of income next April 15, he should bear in mind that the chances are still four out of 10 that his return will be cross checked against data supplied by his employer, bank, etc. and that the unrelenting goal of the IRS is to improve those odds — in its favor, that is.

THE GREAT MEDICAL BREAKTHROUGH

WASHINGTON— Prof. Heinrich Applebaum called me excitedly the other day from his laboratory at the National Institute of Generic Drug Statistics. "I think I've made a breakthrough in medicine that could win me the Nobel Prize."

"What is it?" I demanded.

"You have to come out and see for yourself."

He was waiting amongst his test-tubes.

"What did you do?" I asked.

"I've developed a stronger rat that can survive any medical experiment we perform on it."

"I don't believe it."

"Come," he said, leadin me over to a cage where two white rats were sipping from a saucer of diet cola.

"I got the idea when I read the data on the saccharin dispute. Something bothered me about it. Why were some of the rats getting sick after being forced to eat enough saccharin to kill a horse? The scientists blamed the saccharin, but no one blamed the white rats. There are so many agents being fed and injected into rats that they keep keeling over. Drug companies have put millions of dollars into research, only to be told they couldn't market their product because the white rats couldn't take it.

"So I decided there was only one answer to the problem. And that was to develop a white rat wo coulld stand up to anything we shoved down his throat.

"If I could breed a white rat immune to any kind of disease the FDA would have to give its approval for the new drug."

"Only a mind like yours would think of something like that," I said.

"The trick was to find the right breeds. In every medical experiment there are white rats who are survivors. In the Canadian tests of saccharin only 12 of the 44 rats fed the stuff developed any symptoms. The other 32 thrived on the sweetener and became saccharin junkies.

"I purchased the two healthiest specimens and mated them, and then mated their offspring, and after four generations I got what I anteed -- a super white rat that could withstand any punishment medical science could inflict on it.

"These are two of them. I've fed them the equivalent of 3,000 bottles of diet drinks a day; I've had them smoke 10 packs of cigarettes an hour; I've filled their cage with carbon monoxide; I've made Tris nighties for them, which they have worn for three weeks. I've even strapped them to the engine of a Concorde, and as you can see none of the experiments has had any illeffect on them."

"Because they were looking for the wrong key," Applebaum said. "When a drug didn't come up to FDA standards everyone blamed the drug and not the rat. The ordinary white rat used in laboratories is a pampered animal. It doesn't know what it is to forage for food and slink around garbage dumps. From the day it is born it is given the best of everything.

Applebaum gave each rat a sugar cube.

"What's that?" I asked him.

"Applebaum, what does it all mean?"

"It means a bonanza for the drug and chemical industries. They will no longer have to lobby for less regulation on their products. It means that all the data we now have on what causes sickness in rats will be obsolete. It means once the orders start coming in for my white rats I'm going to be a millionaire!"

"Not to mention the Nobel Prize," I said.

"They'll have to give it to me," Applebaum agreed. "I've found the cure for every disease known to man."

THIS COULD STOP COFFEE PRICES

If all the cafes in the nation, or even in limited areas, would follow the example of those in Carrolton, Mo., the ridiculously high price of coffee might be stopped from going higher, or lowered to a point where folks with average incomes could afford to continue its use.

Twelve cafes or other places serving coffee boycotted it and sold none. Their owners were trying to get others in Chillicothe, Marshall and additional towns and cities to do the same.

A few small cafes refusing to serve the high priced drink will have little effect, but if the movement swept across the nation, we'd soon see prices coming down, since investigators believe there is no real need for the present prices.

AVOIDING ITS DUTY

Commentary In The Manchester Guardian

It is a mystery what sort of things the UN Commission on Human Rights can be concerned with if it is not concerned with the situation in Uganda. A closed meeting of the Commission in Geneva has decided against an investigation, requested by Britain, into the deaths of Archbishop Luwum and two cabinet ministers, and hence, by implication, into the massive death toll reported with varying degrees of reliability from the Ugandan interior. Its offer instead to "keep the situation under review" until its 1978 session, is offensive, and most of all to the people in Uganda whose livesare at risk.

No doubt the commission finds it easier to pronounce on violations of human rights in countries which allow inspection, which have a press capable of reporting such violations, or where internal criticism thrives. But in those cases its work is already done for it because the malpractices are in any event exposed. If the commission has a job at all outside the issuance of homilies it is to investigage countries which resist investigation and allow no free expression within. Uganda at present is top of the list.

FOUL BALL

In defense of the $57,000-a-year salary that Congress recently bestowed on its members, Representative Robert H. Michel, a Republican from Peoria, placed in the Congressional Record the starting lineups of every major league baseball team and the salaries each starter is believed to be getting. Needless to say, $57,000 is not exactly top dollar for a first-line baseball player, and it is also true that a meeting of Congress can be far more entertaining than a baseball game, so Mr. Michel does have a point.

On the other hand, we've never heard of a pitcher being paid $57,000 to serve up as many home run balls as Congress does to the batters from the special interest league. Nor do we know of any $57,000 hitters who could last more than a season if they struck out as often as Congress does on worthwhile legislation. In short, if pay is a measure of performance, Mr. Michel and his teammates, not the baseball stars, are vastly overpaid.

WEDDING BELLS GETTING LATER

Americans are waiting longer to get married, reports the Census Bureau. A new study shows that during 1960-76 the average age at which young men and women first marry increased by about one full year, from 22.8 years to 23.8 years for men and from 20.3 to 21.3 years for women.

In addition, since 1970 the percentage of singles among persons 25 to 39 years has increased, perhaps indicating that not only has later marriage gained general acceptance but also that a higher proportion of adults may never marry than in the recent past.

PASS INSULATION PROVISIONS QUICKLY

From The Pittsburgh Post-Gazette

Predictions are rife in Washington, D.C., that President Carter's energy package faces a long, stiff fight in Congress. That's not necessarily bad because its complexities and ramifications require extensive scrutiny and debate.

But one element in the proposal should not become hung up in the months-long debate. That is the item to establish a system of tax credits to provide an incentive for householders to insulate their homes. Mr. Carter proposed a tax credit of 25 per cent of the first $800 and 15 per cent of the next $1400 spent on approved conservation measures on residences.

There should be a nearly universal consensus that an insulation program provides a widespread method of conserving energy. It will enhance the value of property and therefore is hardly a sacrifice compared to some other parts of the energy package. It can provide jobs and stimulate a lagging sector of the economy. Estimates are that if all homes had six inches of insulation, 600,000 barrels of oil equivalent per cay could be saved, with another 580,000 daily if every home were caulked and weather-stripped properly.

IDENTITY GAP

A group of frontier cavalrymen was gathered around the corral behind the cowtown's livery stable, making bets on who could ride a particularly ornery broomtail called Ole Satan. After Ole Satan had piled just about everybody present, a tall stranger rode into town and, noting the excitement at the corral, swaggered over to investigate. Watching with amusement as rider after rider failed to stick with the outlaw horse, the stranger voiced some uncomplimentary remarks about the U.S. Cavalry's riding abilities.

"Do you think you can do better?" someone challenged.

The stranger sneered. "If I can't bust that bronc, my name ain't John Smith."

PITTSBURGH – Somewhere in the Eastern establishment there's a lyrical, itinerant, ideological troubador who can draw sobs and money out of muddled left-wing millionaires for rebel labor leaders. Thus New York millionaires poured tens of thousands of dollars into the 1972 campaign of the seemingly muddled Arnold Miller, who then ran successfully for the presidency of the United Mine Workers (UMW).

There's far more than a quixotic or esoteric bit of history in that old campaign. Since the wayward reformer took the UMW leadership, the union has become singularly the most vital, or perhaps one of the two most vital, unions not only in the U.S. but across the Western world.

And now election is here again in this chaotic organization, which somehow must muddle through or the free world won't, as oil becomes rarer than a good 5-cent Cuban cigar.

For, without increased coal production from the current 600 million tons to 1.2 billion tons a year, this nation may well have to mortgage itself to a handful of sandy sheikdoms and emirates. Without disciplined, respected leadership of the mine workers, there will be chaos, National Guard troops, confrontations, and endless wildcat walkouts in the coalfields – anything but the crucial steady production needed to prevent big city brownouts, silent steel mills, paralyzed assembly lines and, as some analysts glumly predict, even urban riots.

So the coaldiggers' June 14 election isn't merely another one of those union ballotings. There are three candidates – the strange incumbent "reformer" Arnold Miller, who drew so heavily on the same Eastern establishment in 1972 as Ed Sadlowski did in "steel" earlier this year; the second echelon "reformer" Harry Patrick, secretary treasurer, who now has been accoladed by the ubiquitous Washington lawyer, Joe Rauh, who braintrusted Sadlowski and 42-year-old Lee Roy Patterson, self-proclaimed political scion of the late John L. Lewis, who wants to work with the labor establishment for what sounds like responsible unionism.

There are more complexities in this election than in the new Soviet constitution. All candidates, for example, are running on a platform which includes giving the scores of local miners' unions the right to strike. And mind you, after so many strikes that the pension and welfare funds are now so skimpy that insiders predict benefits will be cut right after the election. The fewer tons of coal produced, the smaller are the royalties per ton going into the funds, which only recently were urged by some coaldiggers to include Navajo medicine men as consultants.

Thus, more strikes may be triggered after the election. Few realize the militancy of the new coaldigger. He's not the old-fashioned, grim pickaxek miner in the lamp cap talking in some ancient Appalachian patois. He's young. He's a professional. He's educated. He has what sociologists call the self-fulfilling Pygmalion drive – high, modern, middle-class expectations.

In the past four or five years -- since the 1972 election – some 30,000 new, virtually all young, miners have come into the union.

The average coaldigger's age is dropping swiftly. In 1964 the miners median age was 49. Ten years later it had toboganned to 34 years. And today the median age is just a decimal point or so under 31 years.

"About a third of them are in their 20s," says one of the best authorities in the field, "and a third in their 50s and the rest are scattered ... And we'll need 150,000 new miners in the next few years."

This is a tremendous change from even half a decade ago. True, the universal picture on the miners' "mantlepiece" is the leonine, gray-maned, bushy-eyebrowed, thundering, legendary John Llewellyn Lewis. But the union men who rose en masse when he spoke, when he defied Presidents, when he dared them to send in troops by rumbling that "you can't mine coal with bayonets," when in effect he told the Supreme Court to go to hell, with Shakespearian lyricism and disdain, are now pouring into the retirees ranks.

Thus young voters will dominate the 185,000 active miners. Their wants are different from the 90,000 retirees who may or may not come out to vote.

So it's a different coal field from the days still imaged by university savants, who see the coaldigger standing alongside his novel in some marshy patch singing, "We shall not, we shall not be moved."

The younger miner is skilled. He earns at least $15,000 a year in cash and far more in benefits. And he wants that to rocket to $100 a day in cash plus fringes. It's a polarized union. It holds the future of this nation's prosperity in its hand so tightly that it's squeezing some of the optimism out of the euphoric White House which now has a special shadow task force riding herd and hard on the miners' crisis.

The candidates are in a tight presidential race. It's up for grabs. Anyone predicting the outcome is a specialist in gall. Regardless of the victor, there will be young militants out there late this summer whooping it up for walkouts to make certain they get a big package when the national contract expires Dec. 7.

That's an ominous date, Pearl Harbor Day. Could be an evil omen.

FOREIGN GOONS ARE UNHAMPERED IN U.S.

By JACK ANDERSON and Les Whitten

WASHINGTON — In column after column, we have reported how foreign secret police have threatened, terrorized and even murdered political dissidents who have fled to the United States for safety. Yet the same goons, who harassed them at home, are able to operate with impunity in this country.

But now,at least, something will be done about it. Sen. George McGovern, D.-S.D., is investigating the secret operations of foreign police within U.S. boundaries. His Senate subcommittee is zeroing in on Chile's DINA, South Korea's KCIA, the Soviet Union's KGB, the Philippines' NISA and Iran's SAVAK.

We have cited abuses by all five of these countries. Last October we charged that DINA, SAVAK and the KCIA had "committed burglaries, attempted kidnapings and plotted murders in the United States.

We warned on Nov. 16, 1975 that Chile's secret police had "hired thugs to track down and assassinate prominent exiles." The following September, exile leader Orlando Letelier was dynamited to death in Washington; the accusing finger points at DINA.

We reported as early as July 17, 1975 that the KCIA was terrorizing Korean exiles in the United States by threatening "their families, relatives and close friends in Korea."

We published documents from SAVAK files detailing how its agents were taught to conduct "secret break-ins." According to our intelligence sources, SAVAK's U.S. operations are directed by Mansur Rafizadeth, who has posed as an Iranian attache at the United Nations. He supervises scores, some say hundreds, of SAVAK agents in this country.

From time to time, we have also identified Soviet KGB agents in this country, including three who posed as newsmen.

Sen. McGovern is also investigating our report on Philippines President Ferdinand Maros' attempt to bribe a defector from his own staff, Primitivo Mijares, to keep him from testifying before the House.

The senator's staff is secretly interviewing dissidents, under U.S. protection, who have been intimidated by foreign police. Several will be asked to testify.

The senator is also drafting legislation that will permit the Justice Dept. to crack down on foreign police operations in this country.

EXPORTING OIL -- President Carter is seriously considering a plan to export valuable Alaskan oil to Japan. This would increase American reliance on imported Arab oil by up to 600,000 barrels a day.

In a private White House meeting, Carter told Rep. Chris Dodd, D.-Conn., that his energy program depends on convincing the public that a crisis exists. Exporting Alaskan oil, the president admitted, would dispel that impression. "It would take a preparatory selling job to explain it to the public," Carter is quoted as saying.

The House voted a ban on exporting Alaskan oil, but the provision was knocked out by the Senate. "I don't want Congress to tie my hands," Carter told Dodd. The congressman was impressed with Carter's technical knowledge on the issue.

The oil companies claim it would be too expensive to transport Alaskan oil from the West Coast, where there is a surplus. They want to "swap" the Alaskan crude with Japan for an equivalent amount of Saudi Arabian oil. This would save millions for the oil tycoons. But the United States, of course, could not rely on Arab imports in time of crisis.

IMMUNE DIPLOMATS – Diplomatic immunity, which allows foreign dignitaries to park illegally and dent fenders, also lets them break contracts at their whim.

Attorney Simon Eilenberg recently signed a contract to buy a posh house in suburban Washington from Carlos Garcia and his wife Marilena, who is an attache at the Brazilian Embassy. But Mrs. Garcia changed her mind and backed out a few days after the contract was signed.

Eilenberg wanted to sue for his dream house, but Garcia is immune to legal action. The State Dept., however, has asked Brazil to waive Mrs. Garcia's immunity in this case.

WHITE HOUSE VISIT – When Harry Truman was president, comedian Jack Benny was once invited to dine at the White House. A White House guard stopped Benny's car at the gate and asked the comic's name. Then, almost apologetically, the guard pinted to Benny's violin case and asked, "What's in there?"

Benny, trying to live up to his reputation, replied: 'I have a machine gun in there." Sighed the guard: "Thank heavens, I thought it was your violin." The anecdote is one of many in an affectionate memoir by Milt Josefsberg, called "The Jack Benny Show, The Life and Times of America's Best Loved Entertainer."

A TAXING TASK

Never in the course of human taxation have so many people been put to so much trouble for so little purpose.

Each year, American businesses spend millions of dollars and devote millions of manhours to assembling tons of documents which, by law, they must submit to the Internal Revenue Service. The documents detail the wages, dividends, interest and other payments they have made to individuals and other corporations.

Contrary to the general belief that the all-seeing computers of the IRS then crosscheck these records against individual and corporate tax returns,60 per cent of the documents regarding individuals and 100 per cent of those regarding corporations are routinely destroyed without anybody even looking at them.

This year, the IRS will shred, pulverize and burn about 250 million unexamined documents submitted by businesses to assist the service in detecting cheating, says the Wall Street Journal. The IRS is, in fact, buying 11 new pulverizing machines, costing $80,000 each, to help destroy the documents.

It is not that the tax collectors place all that much trust in the honesty of the American taxpayer. They are simply overwhelmed. But if this revelation tempts any indiviual to fudge a bit in reporting his sources of income next April 15, he should bear in mind that the chances are still four out of 10 that his return will be cross checked against data supplied by his employer, bank, etc. and that the unrelenting goal of the IRS is to improve those odds — in its favor, that is.

THE GREAT MEDICAL BREAKTHROUGH

WASHINGTON— Prof. Heinrich Applebaum called me excitedly the other day from his laboratory at the National Institute of Generic Drug Statistics. "I think I've made a breakthrough in medicine that could win me the Nobel Prize."

"What is it?" I demanded.

"You have to come out and see for yourself."

He was waiting amongst his test-tubes.

"What did you do?" I asked.

"I've developed a stronger rat that can survive any medical experiment we perform on it."

"Come," he said, leadin me over to a cage where two white rats were sipping from a saucer of diet cola.

"I got the idea when I read the data on the saccharin dispute. Something bothered me about it. Why were some of the rats getting sick after being forced to eat enough saccharin to kill a horse? The scientists blamed the saccharin, but no one blamed the white rats. There are so many agents being fed and injected into rats that they keep keeling over. Drug companies have put millions of dollars into research, only to be told they couldn't market their product because the white rats couldn't take it.

"So I decided there was only one answer to the problem. And that was to develop a white rat wo coulld stand up to anything we shoved down his throat.

"If I could breed a white rat immune to any kind of disease the FDA would have to give its approval for the new drug."

"Only a mind like yours would think of something like that," I said.

"The trick was to find the right breeds. In every medical experiment there are white rats who are survivors. In the Canadian tests of saccharin only 12 of the 44 rats fed the stuff developed any symptoms. The other 32 thrived on the sweetener and became saccharin junkies.

"I purchased the two healthiest specimens and mated them, and then mated their offspring, and after four generations I got what I anteed -- a super white rat that could withstand any punishment medical science could inflict on it.

"These are two of them. I've fed them the equivalent of 3,000 bottles of diet drinks a day; I've had them smoke 10 packs of cigarettes an hour; I've filled their cage with carbon monoxide; I've made Tris nighties for them, which they have worn for three weeks. I've even strapped them to the engine of a Concorde, and as you can see none of the experiments has had any illeffect on them."

"Because they were looking for the wrong key," Applebaum said. "When a drug didn't come up to FDA standards everyone blamed the drug and not the rat. The ordinary white rat used in laboratories is a pampered animal. It doesn't know what it is to forage for food and slink around garbage dumps. From the day it is born it is given the best of everything.

Applebaum gave each rat a sugar cube.

"What's that?" I asked him.

"Applebaum, what does it all mean?"

"It means a bonanza for the drug and chemical industries. They will no longer have to lobby for less regulation on their products. It means that all the data we now have on what causes sickness in rats will be obsolete. It means once the orders start coming in for my white rats I'm going to be a millionaire!"

"Not to mention the Nobel Prize," I said.

"They'll have to give it to me," Applebaum agreed. "I've found the cure for every disease known to man."

THIS COULD STOP COFFEE PRICES

If all the cafes in the nation, or even in limited areas, would follow the example of those in Carrolton, Mo., the ridiculously high price of coffee might be stopped from going higher, or lowered to a point where folks with average incomes could afford to continue its use.

Twelve cafes or other places serving coffee boycotted it and sold none. Their owners were trying to get others in Chillicothe, Marshall and additional towns and cities to do the same.

A few small cafes refusing to serve the high priced drink will have little effect, but if the movement swept across the nation, we'd soon see prices coming down, since investigators believe there is no real need for the present prices.

Commentary In The Manchester Guardian

It is a mystery what sort of things the UN Commission on Human Rights can be concerned with if it is not concerned with the situation in Uganda. A closed meeting of the Commission in Geneva has decided against an investigation, requested by Britain, into the deaths of Archbishop Luwum and two cabinet ministers, and hence, by implication, into the massive death toll reported with varying degrees of reliability from the Ugandan interior. Its offer instead to "keep the situation under review" until its 1978 session, is offensive, and most of all to the people in Uganda whose livesare at risk.

No doubt the commission finds it easier to pronounce on violations of human rights in countries which allow inspection, which have a press capable of reporting such violations, or where internal criticism thrives. But in those cases its work is already done for it because the malpractices are in any event exposed. If the commission has a job at all outside the issuance of homilies it is to investigage countries which resist investigation and allow no free expression within. Uganda at present is top of the list.

FOUL BALL

In defense of the $57,000-a-year salary that Congress recently bestowed on its members, Representative Robert H. Michel, a Republican from Peoria, placed in the Congressional Record the starting lineups of every major league baseball team and the salaries each starter is believed to be getting. Needless to say, $57,000 is not exactly top dollar for a first-line baseball player, and it is also true that a meeting of Congress can be far more entertaining than a baseball game, so Mr. Michel does have a point.

On the other hand, we've never heard of a pitcher being paid $57,000 to serve up as many home run balls as Congress does to the batters from the special interest league. Nor do we know of any $57,000 hitters who could last more than a season if they struck out as often as Congress does on worthwhile legislation. In short, if pay is a measure of performance, Mr. Michel and his teammates, not the baseball stars, are vastly overpaid.

WEDDING BELLS GETTING LATER

In addition, since 1970 the percentage of singles among persons 25 to 39 years has increased, perhaps indicating that not only has later marriage gained general acceptance but also that a higher proportion of adults may never marry than in the recent past.

PASS INSULATION PROVISIONS QUICKLY

From The Pittsburgh Post-Gazette

Predictions are rife in Washington, D.C., that President Carter's energy package faces a long, stiff fight in Congress. That's not necessarily bad because its complexities and ramifications require extensive scrutiny and debate.

But one element in the proposal should not become hung up in the months-long debate. That is the item to establish a system of tax credits to provide an incentive for householders to insulate their homes. Mr. Carter proposed a tax credit of 25 per cent of the first $800 and 15 per cent of the next $1400 spent on approved conservation measures on residences.

There should be a nearly universal consensus that an insulation program provides a widespread method of conserving energy. It will enhance the value of property and therefore is hardly a sacrifice compared to some other parts of the energy package. It can provide jobs and stimulate a lagging sector of the economy. Estimates are that if all homes had six inches of insulation, 600,000 barrels of oil equivalent per cay could be saved, with another 580,000 daily if every home were caulked and weather-stripped properly.

A group of frontier cavalrymen was gathered around the corral behind the cowtown's livery stable, making bets on who could ride a particularly ornery broomtail called Ole Satan. After Ole Satan had piled just about everybody present, a tall stranger rode into town and, noting the excitement at the corral, swaggered over to investigate. Watching with amusement as rider after rider failed to stick with the outlaw horse, the stranger voiced some uncomplimentary remarks about the U.S. Cavalry's riding abilities.

"Do you think you can do better?" someone challenged.

Will U. S. Brown Out?

..New young miners control power balance in nationally critical coaldiggers election

PITTSBURGH – Somewhere in the Eastern establishment there's a lyrical, itinerant, ideological troubador who can draw sobs and money out of muddled left-wing millionaires for rebel labor leaders. Thus New York millionaires poured tens of thousands of dollars into the 1972 campaign of the seemingly muddled Arnold Miller, who then ran successfully for the presidency of the United Mine Workers (UMW).

There's far more than a quixotic or esoteric bit of history in that old campaign. Since the wayward reformer took the UMW leadership, the union has become singularly the most vital, or perhaps one of the two most vital, unions not only in the U.S. but across the Western world.

And now election is here again in this chaotic organization, which somehow must muddle through or the free world won't, as oil becomes rarer than a good 5-cent Cuban cigar.

For, without increased coal production from the current 600 million tons to 1.2 billion tons a year, this nation may well have to mortgage itself to a handful of sandy sheikdoms and emirates. Without disciplined, respected leadership of the mine workers, there will be chaos, National Guard troops, confrontations, and endless wildcat walkouts in the coalfields – anything but the crucial steady production needed to prevent big city brownouts, silent steel mills, paralyzed assembly lines and, as some analysts glumly predict, even urban riots.

So the coaldiggers' June 14 election isn't merely another one of those union ballotings. There are three candidates – the strange incumbent "reformer" Arnold Miller, who drew so heavily on the same Eastern establishment in 1972 as Ed Sadlowski did in "steel" earlier this year; the second echelon "reformer" Harry Patrick, secretary treasurer, who now has been accoladed by the ubiquitous Washington lawyer, Joe Rauh, who braintrusted Sadlowski and 42-year-old Lee Roy Patterson, self-proclaimed political scion of the late John L. Lewis, who wants to work with the labor establishment for what sounds like responsible unionism.

There are more complexities in this election than in the new Soviet constitution. All candidates, for example, are running on a platform which includes giving the scores of local miners' unions the right to strike. And mind you, after so many strikes that the pension and welfare funds are now so skimpy that insiders predict benefits will be cut right after the election. The fewer tons of coal produced, the smaller are the royalties per ton going into the funds, which only recently were urged by some coaldiggers to include Navajo medicine men as consultants.

Thus, more strikes may be triggered after the election. Few realize the militancy of the new coaldigger. He's not the old-fashioned, grim pickaxek miner in the lamp cap talking in some ancient Appalachian patois. He's young. He's a professional. He's educated. He has what sociologists call the self-fulfilling Pygmalion drive – high, modern, middle-class expectations.

In the past four or five years -- since the 1972 election – some 30,000 new, virtually all young, miners have come into the union.

The average coaldigger's age is dropping swiftly. In 1964 the miners median age was 49. Ten years later it had tobogganed to 34 years. And today the median age is just a decimal point or so under 31 years.

"About a third of them are in their 20s," says one of the best authorities in the field, "and a third in their 50s and the rest are scattered ... And we'll need 150,000 new miners in the next few years."

This is a tremendous change from even half a decade ago. True, the universal picture on the miners' "mantlepiece" is the leonine, gray-maned, bushy-eyebrowed, thundering, legendary John Llewellyn Lewis. But the union men who rose en masse when he spoke, when he defied Presidents, when he dared them to send in troops by rumbling that "you can't mine coal with bayonets," when in effect he told the Supreme Court to go to hell, with Shakespearian lyricism and disdain, are now pouring into the retirees ranks.

Thus young voters will dominate the 185,000 active miners. Their wants are different from the 90,000 retirees who may or may not come out to vote.

So it's a different coal field from the days still imaged by university savants, who see the coaldigger standing alongside his novel in some marshy patch singing, "We shall not, we shall not be moved."

The younger miner is skilled. He earns at least $15,000 a year in cash and far more in benefits. And he wants that to rocket to $100 a day in cash plus fringes. It's a polarized union. It holds the future of this nation's prosperity in its hand so tightly that it's squeezing some of the optimism out of the euphoric White House which now has a special shadow task force riding herd and hard on the miners' crisis.

But now,at least, something will be done about it. Sen. George McGovern, D.-S.D., is investigating the secret operations of foreign police within U.S. boundaries. His Senate subcommittee is zeroing in on Chile's DINA, South Korea's KCIA, the Soviet Union's KGB, the Philippines' NISA and Iran's SAVAK.

We have cited abuses by all five of these countries. Last October we charged that DINA, SAVAK and the KCIA had "committed burglaries, attempted kidnapings and plotted murders in the United States.

We warned on Nov. 16, 1975 that Chile's secret police had "hired thugs to track down and assassinate prominent exiles." The following September, exile leader Orlando Letelier was dynamited to death in Washington; the accusing finger points at DINA.

We reported as early as July 17, 1975 that the KCIA was terrorizing Korean exiles in the United States by threatening "their families, relatives and close friends in Korea."

We published documents from SAVAK files detailing how its agents were taught to conduct "secret break-ins." According to our intelligence sources, SAVAK's U.S. operations are directed by Mansur Rafizadeth, who has posed as an Iranian attache at the United Nations. He supervises scores, some say hundreds, of SAVAK agents in this country.

From time to time, we have also identified Soviet KGB agents in this country, including three who posed as newsmen.

Sen. McGovern is also investigating our report on Philippines President Ferdinand Maros' attempt to bribe a defector from his own staff, Primitivo Mijares, to keep him from testifying before the House.

The senator's staff is secretly interviewing dissidents, under U.S. protection, who have been intimidated by foreign police. Several will be asked to testify.

The senator is also drafting legislation that will permit the Justice Dept. to crack down on foreign police operations in this country.

EXPORTING OIL -- President Carter is seriously considering a plan to export valuable Alaskan oil to Japan. This would increase American reliance on imported Arab oil by up to 600,000 barrels a day.

In a private White House meeting, Carter told Rep. Chris Dodd, D.-Conn., that his energy program depends on convincing the public that a crisis exists. Exporting Alaskan oil, the president admitted, would dispel that impression. "It would take a preparatory selling job to explain it to the public," Carter is quoted as saying.

The House voted a ban on exporting Alaskan oil, but the provision was knocked out by the Senate. "I don't want Congress to tie my hands," Carter told Dodd. The congressman was impressed with Carter's technical knowledge on the issue.

The oil companies claim it would be too expensive to transport Alaskan oil from the West Coast, where there is a surplus. They want to "swap" the Alaskan crude with Japan for an equivalent amount of Saudi Arabian oil. This would save millions for the oil tycoons. But the United States, of course, could not rely on Arab imports in time of crisis.

IMMUNE DIPLOMATS – Diplomatic immunity, which allows foreign dignitaries to park illegally and dent fenders, also lets them break contracts at their whim.

Attorney Simon Eilenberg recently signed a contract to buy a posh house in suburban Washington from Carlos Garcia and his wife Marilena, who is an attache at the Brazilian Embassy. But Mrs. Garcia changed her mind and backed out a few days after the contract was signed.

Eilenberg wanted to sue for his dream house, but Garcia is immune to legal action. The State Dept., however, has asked Brazil to waive Mrs. Garcia's immunity in this case.

WHITE HOUSE VISIT – When Harry Truman was president, comedian Jack Benny was once invited to dine at the White House. A White House guard stopped Benny's car at the gate and asked the comic's name. Then, almost apologetically, the guard pinted to Benny's violin case and asked, "What's in there?"

Benny, trying to live up to his reputation, replied: 'I have a machine gun in there." Sighed the guard: "Thank heavens, I thought it was your violin." The anecdote is one of many in an affectionate memoir by Milt Josefsberg, called "The Jack Benny Show, The Life and Times of America's Best Loved Entertainer."

Scheduled Termination Date: September 12, 1977

Rules for Gamerama:

1. Get a FREE Gamerama Master Card on request at the end of the checkout or at store office. Get one FREE Game Ticket every time you visit a participating IGA store. All game materials may also be obtained by mailing request to Gamerama MO, P.O. Box 26, Hazelwood, Missouri 63042 – one request per envelope. To reimburse you for postage on a mail request, a 13¢ stamp will be sent with the game materials. You may also request game materials by calling 800/521-8253 between 8:30 A.M. to 4:00 P.M. EDT. Only one telephone or mail request may be made per day for game materials to be mailed to one person or to one address. No purchase is required. Adults (18 years or older) only eligible to play.

2. On each Game Ticket there are four Gamerama Markers. To reveal the Markers, punch out the perforated portions of the Game Ticket, then separate the punched out portions and you will have four Markers. Each Marker corresponds to a square in one of the Games on your Master Game Card.

3. When you have revealed the Gamerama Markers, carefully place them in their appropriate square on your Master Game Card. EXAMPLE: If one of your Game Markers is a C-167 in the $1.00 Game, insert that Marker in the square numbered C-167 in the $1.00 Game. When you complete any row in a game, you may have a winner. In some games, you will find squares marked FREE and it is unnecessary to collect a Marker to be placed in such FREE squares. FREE squares are not transferable. Only one winner per card.

When you complete any row in a game, you may take the Game Card and the Markers to any participating store and in the presence of authorized store personnel, initial the backs of the Gamerama Markers in the completed row. If the prize category is $1, $2 or $5, store personnel will be able to verify that you have won and give you the prize immediately. If the prize category is $20, $100 or $1,000, store personnel will send your initialed Gamerama Markers and the Game Card, together with a Prize Submission Agreement, for verification. Upon verification, you will be awarded your prize; allow 10 to 14 days for verification.

The quickest way of submitting a claim for a prize is to take it to a participating store. But you may submit it by mail by following these instructions:

Put your initials on the back of each Gamerama Marker in the completed row and sign the Game Card. Mail the Markers, the Game Card and the signed Prize Submission Agreement form, which you can get at the store or by mail, to Gamerama MO, Main LaFrentz & Company (CPA's), P.O. Kids spring into summer!

Photographs

Jill Corti

Attending Bible School

Many kids "spring into summer" by attending their church's Bible School such as this active group of kindergartners under the direction of Kathryn Smith. The group was sharing a time on what they had done with their families. The Murray Lane Baptist Church also offers Bible School to one year olds. In the center photo Matthew Milligan, 1, son of Mr. and Mrs. Glenn Milligan attempts to go up the slide instead of down.

Summer School Bound

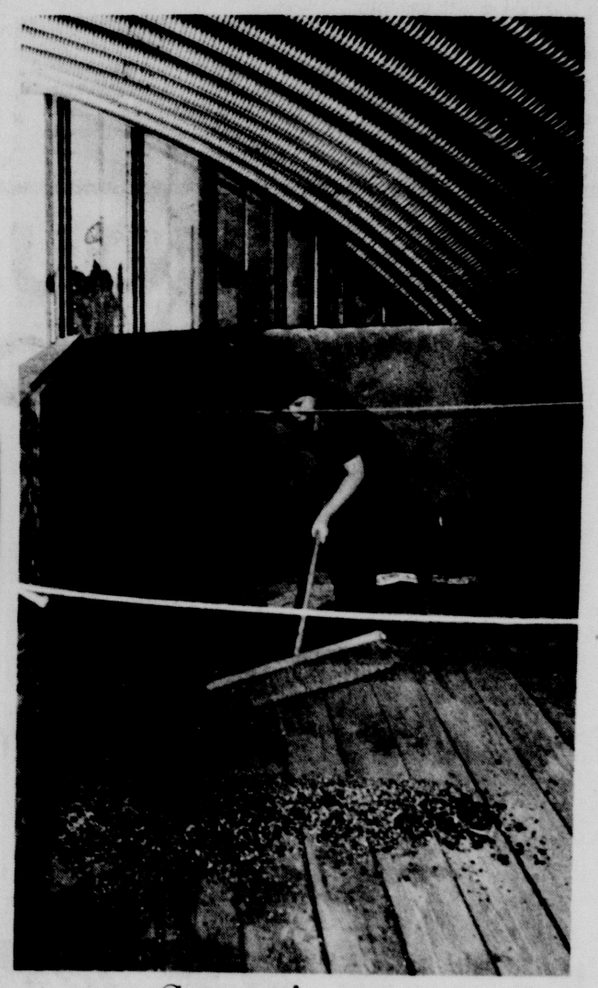
Skateboarding

Skateboarding is fun and that is what Susan Minner, daugher of Mrs. Jane Minner, 824 Agnes enjoys doing during the day. Susan enjoys swimming and playing softball too.



Sweeping up

Steven McMillen, 8, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ervie McMillen of Sikeston Route Three, helps his dad and brother prepare their trailer to haul in wheat. Steven enjoys watching television and playing baseball too.

Washington bound

Forty-two Senior Scouts of the Cotton Boll Girl Scout Council left early Wednesday morning for a 10-day trip to the nations capitol. The girls, under the direction of Mrs. Les Heize of Malden and Mrs. Darrell Alcorn of Sikeston, will visit in the nations capitol and in the Kentucky area.

Walkin' along

Cool-n-refreshing

Many Pets Have Been Heroic

A St. Bernard named Barry saved the lives of 40 people lost in snowdrifts in the Swiss Alps. He didn't have a keg of brandy around his neck, however, but saved them by barking, going for help, and leading them out of danger.

* * *

One of the world's top police dogs named Trep has helped save many people from dangerous drugs. In the city of Miami, Florida, the specially trained canine has sniffed out $63 million worth of narcotics.

* * *

America's pets—an estimated 41 million dogs and 23 million cats actually help save people money. That's because manufacturers of commercial pet foods use meat by-products and grain and grain by-products that people don't usually eat. If pet food manufacturers didn't use these meats, the loss to the meat, poultry and seafood industry would be about $200 million. It would have to be made up in increased food costs to consumers. And the industry's purchases of grain and grain by-products bring a significant income to America's farmers, points out the Pet Food Institute.

MONEY SAVERS — The food that dogs and cats eat help save people money on the food they eat.

An eagle named Old Abe was sworn into the 8th Wisconsin regiment back in 1861. Old Abe took part in 36 battles and 50 skirmishes, each time flying above the troops and screaming his war cry. It's said that he would grab one end of the American flag in his beak and help carry it through the streets.

Open Mind

Dear Open Mind:

Why am I denied information about my biological mother? I want to meet her simply because I am curious. I am 25 years old, married, mother of two, an adult who can take care of myself. I seek an adult encounter and, hopefully, an adult relationship with this woman, whoever she may be.

Jan

Mother may have wanted it this way

Dear Jan:

I do not know why you are being denied information about your biological mother. Having been associated with maternity homes as a staff member for the last quarter of a century I cank think of several possible reasons, but I can also understand your desire to know your natural mother. Your mother may have requested anonymity. She may have reached this decision independently as a mature individual, or she may have been pressured by parents and-or counseling personnel, or she may have simply been overwhelmed by the presenting circumstances and placement for adoption seemed to be the only solution available to her.

One thing is certain; she has not forgotten you and quite likely she has never ceased to love you, or wonder where you are and what you have done with your life. Her concern for you probably runs deep. Doubtless, you consider it a right to know who your mother is. But you must remember that she also has "rights", and your contacting her might cause her even more grief. I recognize that just the opposite may be true and that a reunion might be mutually rewarding.

I am firmly convinced that social agencies and the legislative and judicial branches of government should work together to facilitate the release of information from birth records and adoptive records so that both natural mother and adoptees may be aided and will be spared the frustration which so often seems to accompany their search for other.

Dear Jan:

My response is based upon the assumption that you were put up for adoption as an infant. Yours appears to be a concern that is currently being brought before state legislators in numerous states, and which is being answered with somewhat less red tape these days.

Laws regarding confidentiality are in a state of flux right now. Although you do appear to have some rights to the information you seek, you may in fact encounter difficulty in obtaining it without legal assistance.

I suggest that you present your request, along with all available information (date of adoption, adopting agency, adoptive parents, county, etc.) to the court which handled the adoption. If that meets with no success, then provide the same information to the Missouri Bureau of Vital Statistics. And if that fails, then you may wish to obtain an attorney who will represent your interests.

I have responded to your question directly and not to the motivations behind that question. Possibly there are other alternatives which you may wish to talk about with a Department of Social Services Counselor when you make your request.

By Mrs. Dan Gerber

Is salt necessary in baby food?

Whenever a mother asks me that I tell her that experts say salt is essential in a baby's diet. It helps maintain the water balance in the body and it helps the kidneys function properly.

As I see it, though, the question is not if salt is added, but how much. No salt is added to 54 Gerber products, but in the others no more than 1/4 of 1 percent of iodized salt is added because that's the amount recommended by the National Academy of Sciences in consultation with the American Academy of Pediatrics. Incidentally, that's only one-third to one-fourth the amount preferred by adults.

Many Pets Have Been Heroic

A St. Bernard named Barry saved the lives of 40 people lost in snowdrifts in the Swiss Alps. He didn't have a keg of brandy around his neck, however, but saved them by barking, going for help, and leading them out of danger.

One of the world's top police dogs named Trep has helped save many people from dangerous drugs. In the city of Miami, Florida, the specially trained canine has sniffed out $63 million worth of narcotics.

America's pets—an estimated 41 million dogs and 23 million cats actually help save people money. That's because manufacturers of commercial pet foods use meat by-products and grain and grain by-products that people don't usually eat. If pet food manufacturers didn't use these meats, the loss to the meat, poultry and seafood industry would be about $200 million. It would have to be made up in increased food costs to consumers. And the industry's purchases of grain and grain by-products bring a significant income to America's farmers, points out the Pet Food Institute.

MONEY SAVERS — The food that dogs and cats eat help save people money on the food they eat.

An eagle named Old Abe was sworn into the 8th Wisconsin regiment back in 1861. Old Abe took part in 36 battles and 50 skirmishes, each time flying above the troops and screaming his war cry. It's said that he would grab one end of the American flag in his beak and help carry it through the streets.

Open Mind

Dear Open Mind:

Why am I denied information about my biological mother? I want to meet her simply because I am curious. I am 25 years old, married, mother of two, an adult who can take care of myself. I seek an adult encounter and, hopefully, an adult relationship with this woman, whoever she may be.

Dear Mister Vaughan:

I read with keen interest your recent article (Part IV), entitled the The Drug Scene.

I just wanted you to know I and many members of this church deeply appreciated this information. And will be following through to try to get something done about the massage parlors especially.

As you know K's parlor is located just a few doors from our church. When we looked into the possibility of seeing it moved or closed we found they were operating within existing laws. Now we are trying to find out from our state senator, John Dennis, just how to go about getting a law that would cope with these.

Will pray for you that God will bless you in any future effort to oppose the immoral climate that is so on the increase in Sikeston.

Sincerely,
T.A. McDonough, pastor

Dear Mister Vaughan:

I read with keen interest your recent article (Part IV), entitled the The Drug Scene.

I just wanted you to know I and many members of this church deeply appreciated this information. And will be following through to try to get something done about the massage parlors especially.

As you know K's parlor is located just a few doors from our church. When we looked into the possibility of seeing it moved or closed we found they were operating within existing laws. Now we are trying to find out from our state senator, John Dennis, just how to go about getting a law that would cope with these.

Will pray for you that God will bless you in any future effort to oppose the immoral climate that is so on the increase in Sikeston.

Sincerely,
T.A. McDonough, pastor

The Pastor Speaks

Dr. Arthur C. Fulbright

By The Rev. Dr. Arthur Fulbright

"The Spirit of the Lord is upon me, because he hath anointed me to preach the gospel to the poor; he hath sent me to heal the brokenhearts, to preach deliverance to the captives, and recovering of sight to the blind, to see at liberty them that are bruised, to preach the acceptable year of the Lord."

St. Luke 4:18-19 (K.J.V.)

Some time ago I went through my files to throw out many outdated manuscripts and clippings. I came across articles that I had written in the beginning of my ministry thirty six years ago and I started reminiscing. How good God the Holy Spirit has been to me these thirty-six years. I realized anew the fact that I never doubted my allto the ministry and I will never forget the many fine Christian individuals that have supported me -- along the way.

My church, the United Methodist Church has been very good to me. Every bit of the formal schooling I received, my church gave me the opportunity forit. I have had the unique privilege and obligation to serve every type of church ... from the largest to the smallest... the open country, the village, the small town, the large town, and the big city. I have never had a church that I didn't love.

St. Paul's admonition to the young minister Timothy was "Preach the word..." (II Timothy 4:2) and to me preaching the word is the main function of the minister in the Christian ministry. Often I ask my people to pray for me - that the Holy Spirit may anoint me to "preach the word." I am mindful of the teaching recorded in II Thessalonians 1:11-12, "where also we pray always for you, that our God would count you worthy of faithwith power: That the name of Jesus Christ may be glorified in you, and ye in him, according to the grace of our God and the Lord Jesus Christ." (K.J.V.)

Dear Ann Landers

Girl friend blisters his ears

Dear Ann: My problem is my girlfriend. I am 17 and she is 16. When we first began to date I thought she was terrific and I still do except for one thing—she swears worse than any guy in the locker room.

When I ask her not to swear, she gets up on her women's lib soapbox and says I'm square. My friends tell me a girl with a foul mouth is just about the worst. None of us guys swear when there are girls around so it's not as if she is getting even.

Her mom and dad are lovely people. They never talk that way so it can't be her environment. Why does she do it and how can I get her to stop? Blistered Lobes

Dear Lobes: Girls who use gutter language do it for the shock value. It's an attention-getting device. They like to shake people up.

Drop her for a while and tell her why. If that doesn't produce results, write her off. she would be a continuing source of embarrassment.

Dear Ann: I disagree with your response to the college sophomore who was in her eighth month of psychoanalysis. You said the goal of therapy is to get the patient to the point where he can function without therapy. You then suggested three years as a termination point.

This might be true for someone who is mentally unstable, but many people, including myself, are in therapy to improve the quality of our lives.

This means more than solving a specific problem. It means developing the ability to face anxiety rather than retreat behind defenses out of fear. In fact, day-to-day problems are secondary to the more basic issue of living life to the full and having open and honest relationships with others.

I am a woman who, to all outward appearances, has a successful career and a rewarding family life. yet after five years of therapy I still find myself retreating from close relationships for fear I will become a "non-person."

I can certainly function without therapy, yet therapy is gradually permitting me to trust and care and to overcome my fear of being "overwhelmed" by love.

I suggest you rethink your answer, Ann. Therapy can do a lot more than you give it credit for in your column.— Becoming Me

Dear Becoming: If you can afford the luxury of six or seven— or ten— years of therapy to "Improve the quality of your life," you are more fortunate than most people. the vast majority of patients who are seeing psychiatrists go because they are depressed, insecure, handling the conflicts in their life poorly and need to ventilate frustrations and anxieties.

Your last sentence does me an injustice. I've been a strong supporter of therapy for many years. I've seem human wrecks restored and broken lives rebuilt through therapy. But I have also seen patients spend too many years with a doctor who should have turned them over to someone else long ago. And that was the thrust of my argument.

Miss Freddie Reese and Mr. Ed Matthews

When Miss Freddie Reese graduated from Sikeston High School in 1905, she started out in the world of business. She didn't have too far to go, because the commencement exercise was held upstairs in the Farmers' Supply Company at the "Opry House," and Miss Reese went to work downstairs in the Farmers' Supply Company in the dry goods department. Though she worked only in the dry goods department, she had quite an exposure to business, because the Farmers' Supply Company supplied everything from pins to threshing machines and served mankind "from the cradle to the grave." Charles D. Matthews, Sr., the founder of the Bank of Sikeston owned the Farmers' Supply Company which occupied the same building as the Bank of Sikeston.

Miss Reese was asked if she had an account with the Bank of Sikeston then. She replied; "Oh no, I just made 50 cents a day and never had any money left over to put in the bank." Miss Reese added that as her salary grew, however, she was able to open an account and has maintained it with us until the present.

Saturdays were the busiest days, according to Miss Freddie. The farmers and their families would come into town for the day, and the children would be put down for naps on quilts on the floor of the store. "No one seemed to mind, though," she said.

"Mr. Charlie taught me how to count money," Miss Freddie said about her employer of so long ago. "Clerks today don't count money the way we used to. Last week a young lady handed me change without counting it back. I told her I woulda' got fired for a stunt like that!"

Miss Freddie Reese's story is the story of Sikeston. It is a story of the industrious type of people who have ensured the growth of our community. The Bank of Sikeston is proud of its long association with Freddie Reese, and with you. We have all made Sikeston grow. We are proud of our past and confident in our future.

Hints For Homeowners

ENERGY-SAVING IDEA

That's because the first home comfort systems ever designed with a built-in, pre-programmed logic module that functions as a computer is available from York Air Conditioning this year. The heart of the system is the logic module, which monitors both inside and outside temperatures (including wind conditions) and directs the system to provide either heating or cooling.

The module is installed in a heat pump, an all-electric device that both heats and cools a home. In appearance, it looks like a central air conditioner with one cabinet outside the house and another cabinet which looks like a furnace inside the house.

When cooling is needed it functions as a high efficiency central air conditioner. When heat is needed in the winter, the cycle reverses and the heat pump warms the home by extracting heat present in the outside air and transfers it inside. A heat pump can extract heat from the outside air even when temperatures are -10 degrees Fahrenheit.

Although the heat pump principle is not new, the model sold by York is the first to apply computer technology to residential heating and cooling. According to experts, the new concept should allow homeowners to lower considerably their annual heating and cooling bills.

HOUSEHOLD COMPUTER —It can cut home energy costs.

The new unit is said to be 20 percent more efficient than other heat pumps for heating, and 16 percent more efficient for cooling. Its solid state components are far more reliable and precise than standard control devices, and less susceptible to malfunction.

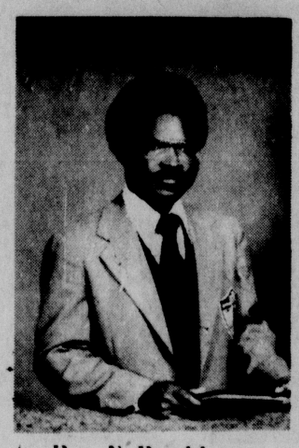
Companies are showing less and less patience with products which don't meet company standards, according to a Conference Board study. Firms are moving more quickly than in the past to slash and even abandon products which are not bringing in satisfactory profits and which have sluggish growth prospects.

Ask the Pastor

God judges all fairly

By Rev. E. Pembleton



Rev. E. Pembleton

Dear Pastor Pembleton: We know morality and legality too often travel in opposite directions. I know some prominent baptized Christians who conveniently hide their morality behind the safety of the law to defraud people whom they have made moral commitment to.

The Bible says "Thou shalt not steal" - I hold legalized theft is not excluded from God's supreme court. In America many supposedly believe if you can do it legally, it's O.K. Are not these Bible toting thieves as guilty in the eyes of God as the common thief? The separation of Church and State will not be a valid excuse to jump back and forth to state for immoral purposes and to the church to cleanse their corrupt morals. Will it not? - Woods.

Dear Brother Woods: The Bible makes it plain in Colossians 3:25 that "he that doeth wrong shall receive for the wrong which he hath done: and god is no respect of persons." He will fairly judge all according to ther work, whether it be good or evil.

Many believe the deceptive philosophy that "the end justifies the means," and if they can find a loophole in man's law, they will squeeze through. I am pleased to advise that there is no loophole in God's law; all will be judged according to their deeds. 1 Corinthians 6:9, 10 says: "Know ye not that the unrighteous shall not inherit the kingdom of God? Be not deceived: neither fornicators, nor idolaters, not adulterers, nor effeminate, nor abusers of themselves with mankind, nor thieves, nor covetous, nor drunkards, nor revilers, nor extortioners, shall inherit the kingdom of God." The above text surely gives the fte of thieves and extortioners.

Dear Pastor Pembleton: Our daughter, very much against our wishes and counsel, married someone of another race. Since that time we have told her that we did not want her to come home, but we are now concerned about our attitude. Do you think we have done right? – Helen.

Dear Helen: No matter how you felt about what she did, it is never right to cut off a son or daughter from association with the rest of the family. You expressed your feelings to her prior to her marriage, but despite this she chose her own course of action. My counsel to you would be to remember that she is your daughter. Someday you may all need each other. Life is too short to allow animosities to separate loved ones. Furthermore, racism is of the devil, and no racist will enter the kingdom of God. You must have real love for all people to be a true child of God.

JEFFERSON CITY — Six Missouri transportation agencies for the elderly and handicapped will be adding 57 vehicles to their fleets as a result of a federal grant announced last week.

The grant directly touches comparatively few of the agencies in the state, but its provisions are likely to have long-range effects on the more than 100 Missouri passenger service organizations of this kind.

Though the $484,000 is the most tangible evidence of federal assistance to these agencies, a provision of the grant also requires the Missouri Department of Transportation to undertake a transportation development program, with an eye to coordinating the activities and services of all the state's independent elderly and handicapped transportation agencies.

Also written into the grant is the provision that it be used only for "rolling stock": vehicles that do the actual transporting.

The need of some agencies to cover immediate operating expenses, — the Older Adult Transportation Service, for example is relying on $290,000 in state and federal emergency funds to see it through this fiscal year — is not met by this particular grant.

Money used to cover operating expenses comes from donations at the local level, state aid and, in some cases, federal aid. Not all of Missouri's elderly and handicapped passenger services receive federal aid.

Phil Richeson, director of transit for the Department of Transportation, explained that the agencies arose independently of each other, and grew according to the needs and support of the local community.

"The people perceived a need in their own neighborhoods or groups and organized to meet that need," Richeson said. "A great number of the organizations in the state are church-related or neighborhood-related and operate with one van in urban areas like St. Louis and Kansas City."

Now, Richeson and other persons familiar with handicapped and elderly transportation needs, believe more comprehensive planning is needed on the statewide level to insure that agencies operate in an efficient and coordinated manner.

"It's our responsibility to develop a statewide program," Richeson said. "Basically, we've got to look at what resources we have and where we can provide the best service. This will involve working out some kind of long-range scheme."

Despite the annual funding difficulties, transportation of the elderly and handicapped has grown considerably in recent years. OATS alone furnished approximately 1,000 one-way passenger trips in 1971. By 1976, that number had increased to almost 150,000.

OATS general manager Peter Schauer believes that further growth will be predicted on the sort of development program the Department of Transportation will be undertaking.

"We can't make decisions independent of one another anymore," Schauer said. "The service itself has gotten too big to go off on its own with no knowledge of how its activities will affect state agencies."

While the question of how the overall service may affect state agencies is important, Richeson said the department's study will examine how the community agencies affect one another, and how service to areas in the state could be improved.

"It's a straight-forward managerial question," Richeson said. "Some consolidation (of now-separate agencies) may be in order. The potential for some combination seems to be there."

POLLY'S PROBLEM

By Polly Cramer

DEAR POLLY — I would like to know how to remove some white paint from a black vinyl sofa. — JANICE.

DEAR JANICE — Hardened specks of paint can be rather difficult to remove. You might first try to see if some of them will come off with your fingernail. A cotton tipped stick might also be dipped in turpentine and then applied to the specks. After removing spots, go over area with cotton dipped in clear water. — POLLY.

DEAR POLLY — My Pet Peeve is with the dirty language we so often hear. Why should a well groomed man or woman not be as proud of the words that come out of his or her mouth as of their personal appearance? Words mirror one's thoughts and thoughts shape that act that will follow sooner or later. — BESSIE.

DEAR POLLY — Fran wanted to know how to remove crayon marks from wood paneling. I had the same problem and my sister-in-law suggested just rubbing with a dry cloth. This worked great for me and removes crayon marks from any surface that is SMOOTH and SHINY better than a cleanser. And there's no damage to the paneling. — LYDIA.

DEAR POLLY — Campers or those with back yard swimming pools often need a dressing room. A simple one can be made by hanging a large umbrella from a tree branch and then hooking a plastic curtain to the tips of the umbrella ribs. — MELODY.

DEAR POLLY — I have arthritis in my knees so I wear only pants suits and slacks. Instead of buying expensive tunics to go with them I cut off some nice, no longer worn dresses at hip length and then hem them. They look nice with slacks for every day wear. — A.F.

Hints For Homeowners

That's because the first home comfort systems ever designed with a built-in, pre-programmed logic module that functions as a computer is available from York Air Conditioning this year. The heart of the system is the logic module, which monitors both inside and outside temperatures (including wind conditions) and directs the system to provide either heating or cooling.

The module is installed in a heat pump, an all-electric device that both heats and cools a home. In appearance, it looks like a central air conditioner with one cabinet outside the house and another cabinet which looks like a furnace inside the house.

When cooling is needed it functions as a high efficiency central air conditioner. When heat is needed in the winter, the cycle reverses and the heat pump warms the home by extracting heat present in the outside air and transfers it inside. A heat pump can extract heat from the outside air even when temperatures are -10 degrees Fahrenheit.

Although the heat pump principle is not new, the model sold by York is the first to apply computer technology to residential heating and cooling. According to experts, the new concept should allow home-

The new unit is said to be 20 percent more efficient than other heat pumps for heating, and 16 percent more efficient for cooling. Its solid state components are far more reliable and precise than standard control devices, and less susceptible to malfunction.

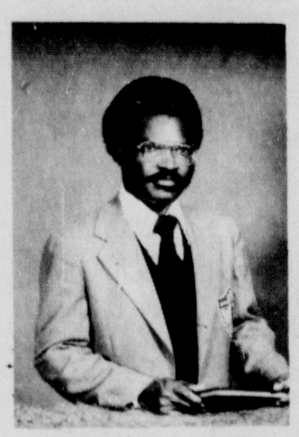
Companies are showing less and less patience with products which don't meet company standards, according to a Conference Board study. Firms are moving more quickly than in the past to slash and even abandon products which are not bringing in satisfactory profits and which have sluggish growth prospects.

Ask the Pastor

God judges all fairly

By Rev. E. Pembleton



Rev. E. Pembleton

Dear Pastor Pembleton: We know morality and legality too often travel in opposite directions. I know some prominent baptized Christians who conveniently hide their morality behind the safety of the law to defraud people whom they have made moral commitment to.

The Bible says "Thou shalt not steal" - I hold legalized theft is not excluded from God's supreme court. In America many supposedly believe if you can do it legally, it's O.K. Are not these Bible toting thieves as guilty in the eyes of God as the common thief? The separation of Church and State will not be a valid excuse to jump back and forth to state for immoral purposes and to the church to cleanse their corrupt morals. Will it not? - Woods.

Dear Brother Woods: The Bible makes it plain in Colossians 3:25 that "he that doeth wrong shall receive for the wrong which he hath done: and god is no respect of persons." He will fairly judge all according to ther work, whether it be good or evil.

Many believe the deceptive philosophy that "the end justifies the means," and if they can find a loophole in man's law, they will squeeze through. I am pleased to advise that there is no loophole in God's law; all will be judged according to their deeds. 1 Corinthians 6:9, 10 says: "Know ye not that the unrighteous shall not inherit the kingdom of God? Be not deceived: neither fornicators, nor idolaters, not adulterers, nor effeminate, nor abusers of themselves with mankind, nor thieves, nor covetous, nor drunkards, nor revilers, nor extortioners, shall inherit the kingdom of God." The above text surely gives the fte of thieves and extortioners.

Dear Pastor Pembleton: Our daughter, very much against our wishes and counsel, married someone of another race. Since that time we have told her that we did not want her to come home, but we are now concerned about our attitude. Do you think we have done right? -- Helen.

Dear Helen: No matter how you felt about what she did, it is never right to cut off a son or daughter from association with the rest of the family. You expressed your feelings to her prior to her marriage, but despite this she chose her own course of action. My counsel to you would be to remember that she is your daughter. Someday you may all need each other. Life is too short to allow animosities to separate loved ones. Furthermore, racism is of the devil, and no racist will enter the kingdom of God. You must have real love for all people to be a true child of God.

JEFFERSON CITY — Six Missouri transportation agencies for the elderly and handicapped will be adding 57 vehicles to their fleets as a result of a federal grant announced last week.

The grant directly touches comparatively few of the agencies in the state, but its provisions are likely to have long-range effects on the more than 100 Missouri passenger service organizations of this kind.

Though the $484,000 is the most tangible evidence of federal assistance to these agencies, a provision of the grant also requires the Missouri Department of Transportation to undertake a transportation development program, with an eye to coordinating the activities and services of all the state's independent elderly and handicapped transportation agencies.

Also written into the grant is the provision that it be used only for "rolling stock": vehicles that do the actual transporting.

The need of some agencies to cover immediate operating expenses, — the Older Adult Transportation Service, for example is relying on $290,000 in state and federal emergency funds to see it through this fiscal year — is not met by this particular grant.

Money used to cover operating expenses comes from donations at the local level, state aid and, in some cases, federal aid. Not all of Missouri's elderly and handicapped passenger services receive federal aid.

The Missouri Department of Transportation is responsible for administrating available federal aid to these agencies.

Phil Richeson, director of transit for the Department of Transportation, explained that the agencies arose independently of each other, and grew according to the needs and support of the local community.

"The people perceived a need in their own neighborhoods or groups and organized to meet that need," Richeson said. "A great number of the organizations in the state are church-related or neighborhood-related and operate with one van in urban areas like St. Louis and Kansas City."

Now, Richeson and other persons familiar with handicapped and elderly transportation needs, believe more comprehensive planning is needed on the statewide level to insure that agencies operate in an efficient and coordinated manner.

"It's our responsibility to develop a statewide program," Richeson said. "Basically, we've got to look at what resources we have and where we can provide the best service. This will involve working out some kind of long-range scheme."

Despite the annual funding difficulties, transportation of the elderly and handicapped has grown considerably in recent years. OATS alone furnished approximately 1,000 one-way passenger trips in 1971. By 1976, that number had increased to almost 150,000.

OATS general manager Peter Schauer believes that further growth will be predicted on the sort of development program the Department of Transportation will be undertaking.

"We can't make decisions independent of one another anymore," Schauer said. "The service itself has gotten too big to go off on its own with no knowledge of how its activities will affect state agencies."

While the question of how the overall service may affect state agencies is important, Richeson said the department's study will examine how the community agencies affect one another, and how service to areas in the state could be improved.

"It's a straight-forward managerial question," Richeson said. "Some consolidation (of now-separate agencies) may be in order. The potential for some combination seems to be there."

To some of the state's smaller agencies, though, talk of statewide planning had

POLLY'S PROBLEM

By Polly Cramer

DEAR POLLY — I would like to know how to remove some white paint from a black vinyl sofa. — JANICE.

DEAR JANICE — Hardened specks of paint can be rather difficult to remove. You might first try to see if some of them will come off with your fingernail. A cotton tipped stick might also be dipped in turpentine and then applied to the specks. After removing spots, go over area with cotton dipped in clear water. — POLLY.

DEAR POLLY — My Pet Peeve is with the dirty language we so often hear. Why should a well groomed man or woman not be as proud of the words that come out of his or her mouth as of their personal appearance? Words mirror one's thoughts and thoughts shape that act that will follow sooner or later. — BESSIE.

DEAR POLLY — Fran wanted to know how to remove crayon marks from wood paneling. I had the same problem and my sister-in-law suggested just rubbing with a dry cloth. This worked great for me and removes crayon marks from any surface that is SMOOTH and SHINY better than a cleanser. And there's no damage to the paneling. — LYDIA.

DEAR POLLY — Campers or those with back yard swimming pools often need a dressing room. A simple one can be made by hanging a large umbrella from a tree branch and then hooking a plastic curtain to the tips of the umbrella ribs. — MELODY.

DEAR POLLY — I have arthritis in my knees so I wear only pants suits and slacks. Instead of buying expensive tunics to go with them I cut off some nice, no longer worn dresses at hip length and then hem them. They look nice with slacks for every day wear. — A.F.

Missourians break records in fighting lung diseases

Missourians broke all records in efforts tofight lung disease in 1976 by contributing $388,652 to the Christmas Seal campaign, said E. A. Richter, president of the American Lung Association of Eastern Missouri. The Christmas Seal organizationalso received $25,817 from special emphysema appeals.

In addition, a bequest of $314,000 from the estate of the late Dr. Herman F. Cassel, a St. Louis dentist, nearly doubled the amount of money raised last year. Income from the Cassel bequest will be used to establish a $12,000 research fellowship at the University of Missouri-Columbia School of Medicine, Richter said.

The Lunch Association already provides similar fellowships to the medical schools at Washington and St. Louis Universities. Richter pointed out that medical discoveries made by a number of the doctors working under these grants, in recent years, have gained national attention in the field of lung disease medicine and control.

The Lung Association, which was founded in 1904 to fight tuberuclosis, is primarily an educational organization. In addition to working for the eradication of TB, it provides educational materials and films to schools and organizations and conducts professional trainings for doctors. nurses and respiratory technicians on such diseases as lung cancer, TB, emphysema, asthma and pediatric lung diseases. It also is engaged in a broad public education program about hazards to the lungs from cigarette smoking, air pollutionand dusts and chemicals in the workplace.

The anti-smoking messages and the emphasis on non-smokers' rights have aroused the ire of the tobacco industry, Richter said, and it is mounting a massive public relations program to discredit the workof the American Lung Association. Richter promised the Lung Association would continue to inform people about the effect of smoking on their respiratory system.

The increase in revenue for the Lung Association will permit it to conduct more educational programs, and to expand efforts to eradicate TB in Missouri. He pointed out that in the past two years, TB incidence in the state has grown, with minor outbreaks in several communities in eastern Missouri. The most recent outbreak was discovered in Mexico where four active cases prompted a skin test screening of junior high students and adults. The Lung ssociation provided the tuberculin tests needed to examine those who might have been exposed to TB.

One of our jobs at the Lung Association, Richter said, is to keep the public and state officials from becoming complacent about TB and to support sensible state-wide TB control programs.

Womantime & Co TV series for the public

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — It's a show about women, by women, for women, but producer Roxanne Russell does not want her public television series "Womantime & Co." classified as a feminist show.

"We're really aiming for a broad spectrum of women who wouldn't consider themselves feminists but certainly are interested in what's happening to women these days," said Ms. Russell. "We're feminists, but soft feminists. We're not trying to preach a doctrine."

The show started two years ago at KQED in San Francisco. After a second successful season this year, 144 of the nation's 156 public broadcast stations bought the show for the 1978 season.

"Womantime & Co." is the brainchild of Martha Glessing, who was KQED's membership director when she began lobbying to offer women some alternatives to the traditional daytime programming of game shows and soap operas.

"The people who program for women at the networks are not at all concerned about where women really are, except to change the story line of some soap operas to incude women doctors or a segment on abortion," said Mrs. Glessing.

She said a Nielsen rating their first season discovered that "Womantime" had picked up about 10,000 homes per week from the daytime viewing market.

Madeline David, vice president of daytime programming for NBC, said about 85 per cent of daytime viewers are women and "if you gauge what they want by what they look at, they are getting pretty much what they want." She said soap operas continue to be extremely popular and experiments with some alternate kinds of programs mostly have been unsuccessful on commerical television.

The show's magazine format combines film remotes and live and taped interviews. Women guests have included California Chief Justice Rose Bird, activist singer Joan Baez and director Antonia Brico. The topics have ranged from childbirth and contraception to women artists and housespouses.

"Sign on the Dotted Line," a show on the need for women to plan their financial security, won an Emmy for outstanding achievement from the Northern California chapter of the National Academy of Television Arts and Sciences. The same group awarded "Womantime" a second Emmy for a show on women and religion.

Ms. Russell said she tries to seek out average women, as well as prominent ones. One of next season's shows features San Francisco's "Cable Car Lady" — octogenarian Frieda Klussmann who led the fight to save the city's famous rickety mode of transportation. Another will be on menopause.

"We like to show people changing patterns," Ms. Russell said. "We want to share them with people, saying this is interesting, what do you think about it?"

She said they have received a handful of complaints from women who would like to see the show take a heavier feminist stance, but they also have heard from housewives who enjoyed "Womantime" because it wasn't too political.

Cancer risks to be studied at future meetings of USDA expert nitrite panel

WASHINGTON— Do consumers run any risk of contracting cancer when they consume meat and poultry products that have been cured with nitrites and nitrates? should this risk outweigh the potential danger of botulism that persons might face if nitrites and nitrates were eliminated from such products?

These, and related questions, will be the key areas focused upon by the U.S. Department of Agriculture's (USDA) expert panel on nitrites and nitrosamines at its future meetings, possibly as soon as late June, USDA has announced.

According to Carol Tucker Foreman, assistant secretary of agriculture for food and consumer services and chairperson of the panel, the panel has been focusing its attention on ways to reduce the levels of nitrite and nitrate used in curing products as a means of protecting consumers against botulism.

"The time has come, now, for the panel to shift its focus to the other critical issue in this controversy," Ms. Foreman said, "so that it can complete its study and make recommendations to the Secretary by Sept. 30, when the panel is slated to go out of existence.

"We know–based on extensive laboratory tests–that nitrites and nitrates can combine with secondary amines to form nitrosamines. We know, too, that secondary amines are present in the human body. We also know that preformed nitrosamines are present in some food products."

"We do not know the extent of the health threat from preformed nitrosamines. Nor do we have complete evidence that these nitrosamines will actually form in the human body after a person eats meat and poultry products cured with nitrites and nitrates, and--if this does happen--whether or not there is a risk of the person getting cancer as a result," Ms. Foreman explained.

The new thrust of the panel's efforts was initiated at its meeting held May 31, in Washington, D.C. During that meeting, the panel reviewed the data it has collected on botulism--which show that the bacteria which could lead to the production of botulinal toxin do exist throughout the U.S. and can be present in meat and poultry products, as well as other foods.

Ms. Foreman emphasized that a position paper drawn up by the panel did not represent the panel's final decision. "This paper is based on information available to the panel only through its first nine meetings," Ms. Foreman noted, "and is, of course, subject to modification. The panel is now turning to alternative methods of preserving meat without using nitrite or nitrate, as well as the question concerning nitrosamines."

A major portion of the May 31 meeting was devoted to reviewing some alternative processing methods, Ms. Foreman pointed out, including heating, freezing, drying, salting and irradiation.

In addition, three sub-groups of panel members were asked to meet before the next meeting to consider in more detail (1) what kinds of other chemicals or processing methods might be used to preserve meat and poultry, (2) what kinds of samples would need to be collected and tested to properly evaluate the full range of alternative preservation methods, and (3) what impact would alternative preservation methods have on economic and environmental aspects of the problem, as well as energy requirements.

"With these issues clarified, the panel then will be prepared to concentrate on the carcinogen issues associated with the use of nitrites and nitrates in its next meetings, before preparing its final report by September 30," Ms. Foreman concluded.

FUNNY BUSINESS — By Roger Bollen

BOCA RATON, Fla. (AP) — Tracy Bauman can negotiate the balance beam as gracefully as a gymnast now that she's been visiting the YMCA gym two mornings a week.

What's special about Tracy is that she's 3 years old, and — on her good days — the tiny athlete is the star of the Diaper Gym, a new concept in exercising babies.

Diaper Gym, equipped with trampolines, ladders, balance beams and mats, has been open at the Boca Raton YMCA only three months, but the program has been speading to Y's around the country since the first Diaper Gym opened in Detroit in 1960.

Detroit enrolls babies at 3 months; Chicago takes them at 9 months, Boca Raton took a 1-month old child, and instructors in Durham, N.H go right into homes to start teaching swimming to newborns as young as 24 hours old.

Mrs. Prudden, who operates the Bonnie Prudden Institute for Physical Fitness in Boston, said she stumbled across the idea that children would benefit from exercise in the early 1940s when her newborn baby fell into a pool and came up smiling.

By 1960 she said the YMCA in Detroit agreed to add a child exercise program.

"They got a baby, got a mommy, got a pretty instructor and called the Detroit Press. Everybody knows dogs and babies will steal any show, and that's how it got started," said Mrs. Prudden, who trains instructors to teach her exercise programs at Y's around the nation.

The object of exercising babies, according to instructor Roger Hawkins at the Boca Raton YMCA, is to improve coordination and development of the child's nervous system. He said he saw the need for exercising babies when he noticed lack of coordination among his 4-and 5-year-olds.

The show started two years ago at KQED in San Francisco. After a second successful season this year, 144 of the nation's 156 public broadcast stations bought the show for the 1978 season.

"Womantime & Co." is the brainchild of Martha Glessing, who was KQED's membership director when she began lobbying to offer women some alternatives to the traditional daytime programming of game shows and soap operas.

"The people who program for women at the networks are not at all concerned about where women really are, except to change the story line of some soap operas to incude women doctors or a segment on abortion," said Mrs. Glessing.

She said a Nielsen rating their first season discovered that "Womantime" had picked up about 10,000 homes per week from the daytime viewing market.

Madeline David, vice president of daytime programming for NBC, said about 85 per cent of daytime viewers are women and "if you gauge what they want by what they look at, they are getting pretty much what they want." She said soap operas continue to be extremely popular and experiments with some alternate kinds of programs mostly have been unsuccessful on commerical television.

The show's magazine format combines film remotes and live and taped interviews. Women guests have included California Chief Justice Rose Bird, activist singer Joan Baez and director Antonia Brico. The topics have ranged from childbirth and contraception to women artists and housespouses.

"Sign on the Dotted Line," a show on the need for women to plan their financial security, won an Emmy for outstanding achievement from the Northern California chapter of the National Academy of Television Arts and Sciences. The same group awarded "Womantime" a second Emmy for a show on women and religion.

Ms. Russell said she tries to seek out average women, as well as prominent ones. One of next season's shows features San Francisco's "Cable Car Lady" — octogenarian Frieda Klussmann who led the fight to save the city's famous rickety mode of transportation. Another will be on menopause.

"We like to show people changing patterns," Ms. Russell said. "We want to share them with people, saying this is interesting, what do you think about it?"

She said they have received a handful of complaints from women who would like to see the show take a heavier feminist stance, but they also have heard from housewives who enjoyed "Womantime" because it wasn't too political.

Cancer risks to be studied at future meetings of USDA expert nitrite panel

WASHINGTON— Do consumers run any risk of contracting cancer when they consume meat and poultry products that have been cured with nitrites and nitrates? should this risk outweigh the potential danger of botulism that persons might face if nitrites and nitrates were eliminated from such products?

These, and related questions, will be the key areas focused upon by the U.S. Department of Agriculture's (USDA) expert panel on nitrites and nitrosamines at its future meetings, possibly as soon as late June, USDA has announced.

According to Carol Tucker Foreman, assistant secretary of agriculture for food and consumer services and chairperson of the panel, the panel has been focusing its attention on ways to reduce the levels of nitrite and nitrate used in curing products as a means of protecting consumers against botulism.

"The time has come, now, for the panel to shift its focus to the other critical issue in this controversy," Ms. Foreman said, "so that it can complete its study and make recommendations to the Secretary by Sept. 30, when the panel is slated to go out of existence.

"We know--based on extensive laboratory tests--that nitrites and nitrates can combine with secondary amines to form nitrosamines. We know, too, that secondary amines are present in the human body. We also know that preformed nitrosamines are present in some food products."

"We do not know the extent of the health threat from preformed nitrosamines. Nor do we have complete evidence that these nitrosamines will actually form in the human body after a person eats meat and poultry products cured with nitrites and nitrates, and--if this does happen--whether or not there is a risk of the person getting cancer as a result," Ms. Foreman explained.

The new thrust of the panel's efforts was initiated at its meeting held May 31, in Washington, D.C. During that meeting, the panel reviewed the data it has collected on botulism--which show that the bacteria which could lead to the production of botulinal toxin do exist throughout the U.S. and can be present in meat and poultry products, as well as other foods.

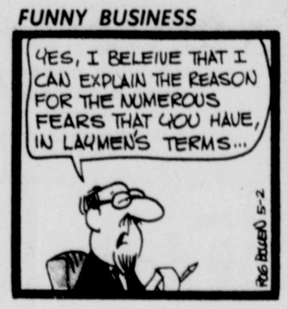
Ms. Foreman emphasized that a position paper drawn up by the panel did not represent the panel's final decision. "This paper is based on information available to the panel only through its first nine meetings," Ms. Foreman noted, "and is, of course, subject to modification. The panel is now turning to alternative methods of preserving meat without using nitrite or nitrate, as well as the question concerning nitrosamines."

A major portion of the May 31 meeting was devoted to reviewing some alternative processing methods, Ms. Foreman pointed out, including heating, freezing, drying, salting and irradiation.

In addition, three sub-groups of panel members were asked to meet before the next meeting to consider in more detail (1) what kinds of other chemicals or processing methods might be used to preserve meat and poultry, (2) what kinds of samples would need to be collected and tested to properly evaluate the full range of alternative preservation methods, and (3) what impact would alternative preservation methods have on economic and environmental aspects of the problem, as well as energy requirements.

"With these issues clarified, the panel then will be prepared to concentrate on the carcinogen issues associated with the use of nitrites and nitrates in its next meetings, before preparing its final report by September 30," Ms. Foreman concluded.

FUNNY BUSINESS — By Roger Bollen



Diaper gym for tots

BOCA RATON, Fla. (AP) — Tracy Bauman can negotiate the balance beam as gracefully as a gymnast now that she's been visiting the YMCA gym two mornings a week.

What's special about Tracy is that she's 3 years old, and — on her good days — the tiny athlete is the star of the Diaper Gym, a new concept in exercising babies.

Diaper Gym, equipped with trampolines, ladders, balance beams and mats, has been open at the Boca Raton YMCA only three months, but the program has been speading to Y's around the country since the first Diaper Gym opened in Detroit in 1960.

Detroit enrolls babies at 3 months; Chicago takes them at 9 months, Boca Raton took a 1-month old child, and instructors in Durham, N.H go right into homes to start teaching swimming to newborns as young as 24 hours old.

Mrs. Prudden, who operates the Bonnie Prudden Institute for Physical Fitness in Boston, said she stumbled across the idea that children would benefit from exercise in the early 1940s when her newborn baby fell into a pool and came up smiling.

By 1960 she said the YMCA in Detroit agreed to add a child exercise program.

"They got a baby, got a mommy, got a pretty instructor and called the Detroit Press. Everybody knows dogs and babies will steal any show, and that's how it got started," said Mrs. Prudden, who trains instructors to teach her exercise programs at Y's around the nation.

The object of exercising babies, according to instructor Roger Hawkins at the Boca Raton YMCA, is to improve coordination and development of the child's nervous system. He said he saw the need for exercising babies when he noticed lack of coordination among his 4-and 5-year-olds.

Published notices key to taxpayer savings

Consultant
Missouri Public
Expenditure Survey

Under a new law the great bulk of the 2,500 local governments in Missouri that impose property taxes are required, beginning this year, to give public notice and hold a public hearing before they finalize their property tax rates. Only small units not having a paid officer or clerk are exempt from the requirement.

The effectiveness of the law depends largely upon newspapers serving as the medium of publication for the notice of hearing. The new law thus strengthens the contribution the press has traditionally made toward sound public finance by reporting in its news columns on the tax rate-setting process.

The measure is called the open window law. It is designed to provide a window through which the public can watch tax rates being set. It fills a pressing need, because a large proportion of local governments adopt their budgets early in the calendar year, before the assessed valuations on which they will compute their tax rates have been established. At that time, using an estimate of assessed valuation, they must compute a tentative tax rate to produce the revenue their budgets require from the property tax.

Later their assessed valuation becomes known, and they are required to recompute their tax rate, substituting the current year's valuation for the earlier estimate of valuation — so that their tax rate will produce no more or no less revenue than their budget requires from the property tax.

The trouble has been there has been no open window through which property taxpayers could watch this process. With assessed valuation rising rapidly on a year-to-year basis, many local governments, in computing tentative tax rates, have failed to estimate their valuations as high as they later turned out to be. Then, when their assessed valuation proved higher, they did not reduce their earlier tentative tax rate. Instead, they let it apply to the increased valuation, with the result: It produced more revenue from from the property tax than their budgets called for — in other words, a windfall.

Prior to enactment of the open window law, there was no way for the public to know that these rate reductions were in order or that they were being by-passed on a widespread sclale. Bu Missouri Public Expenditure Survey, a governmental research organization, examined individually the way several hundred local governments had set their rates and found that taking of windfalls was commonplace. It found that each year taxpayers were unknowingly paying out many millions more in taxes than the budgets of local governments required in revenue from the property tax.

It was this finding of the Survey that led the legislature to enact the open window bill. The property tax, yielding more than a billion dollars, as being imposed with no adequate way for the public to monitor trhe setting of tax rates.

A problem under the new law will be making many hundred local governments aware of its requirements of them. Newspapers will serve the public interest by getting in touch with the local governments in their counties and bringing to their attention the type of hearing notice that complies with the law.

The most effective way to do this would be to supply local governments in your county with a sample of the notice they are required to use. There are four types: For school districts; counties; municipalities; and special districts and miscellaneous political subdivisions.

The form of notice for school districts accompanies this article. Additional samples of it and of the other types of notice can be obtained from Missouri Public Expenditure Survey, P. O. Box 56, Jefferson City, Mo. 65101. These forms have been approved by the appropriate state agencies.

The four forms of notice vary in some important details to fit the types of local governments for which they are designed, but they all have a common characteristic—they must show the information on which judgments can be formed as to whether tax rates are being properly set.

Like the notice accompanying this article, they all require local governments to show their current year's assessed valuation and the amount of revenue their budgets require from the property tax. The forms call for the tax rate to be set by dividing the current assessed valuation into the amount of property tax revenue required by the budget—which is the proper way to compute a tax rate.

The clean-cut requirements of the notice should halp end the costly, confused practices that have prevailed so widely, such as using the previous year's valuation instead of the current year's in computing the tax rate, or seeking maximum property tax take without adequate budgetary justification.

While well-designed, these forms, nevertheless, are not a panacea. When the published notices indicate rates are not being properly set, citizens will need to attend the hearings and insist that the law be complied with. And the press will need to analytically report on the rate-setting process.

The law requires that the notices appear at least seven days before hearings are held and tax rates set. But the time of year rates must be set varies by type of political subdivision and it is essential that newspapers know when the various types of local government should publish their notices and hold their hearings.

School districts are required to finalize their tax rates by July 15. But that is a deadline. As a practical matter, no prohibition exists against the tax rate being finalized earlier. School districts can adopt their budgets in the spring and the current year's assessed valuation must be spread on the assessment rolls by May 31.

Early June would not be too soon for newspapers to bring to the attention of school districts in their areas that they should publish the notice of hearing seven days before setting their tax rates.

Counties must finalize tax rates by September 20. The wording of the statute is that it should take place "after the assessor's books have been adjusted and corrected according to law, but not later then September 20." Like school districts, counties may set their rates far before the deadline, and often do. Mid-July would not be too early to bring to their attention the new requirement that they must publish a notice and hold a hearing before setting tax rates.

The fiscal years of municipalities vary, whichresults in their tax rates being set at differing times during the year. To ascertain when municipalities shouldish their hearing notices, newspapers will need to examine th circumstances of individual municipalities.

Other types of local governments — special districts and miscellaneous political subdivisions — have fiscal cycles corresponding with those of counties. Under the open window law, the county clerk is required to transmit their assessed valuations to them and the county collects the property tax for them. Like counties, September 20 is the deadline for finalizing their tax rates. Here, also, there is no prohibition against the rates being set much earlier than that. Mid- July would not be too early to bring the public notice and hearing requirement to the attention of such political subdivisions.

The new law specifies that counties must publish their notices in newspapers. It makes the same requirement of other political subdivisions, but includes an option to post the notice in an apparent gesture to the minuscule units found in various places. In the opinion of Missouri Public Expenditure Survey, exercise of that option, even by small units, would prevent adequate public monitoring of tax rates. The Survey believes that the general public interest will be served if newspapers insist that hearing notices be published.

The imposition of many millions in unnecessary property taxes can be prevented through public monitoring of the tax rate- setting process. And in this newspapers can play a key role.

GI checks come at end of month

KANSAS CITY— A change in GI Bill payment procedures, effective June 1, brings checks at the end of the month rather than at the beginning to 1.5 million veterans, dependents and servicemembers enrolled in Veterans Administration education programs.

Another June 1 change, brought about by law, modifies an arrangement which in the past automatically gave trainees a two-month morey advance at the start of school.

Ending of the prepayment system will have the most noticeable effect on veteran-students continuously enrolled this summer. They received their last VA check under the prepayment system on May 1, covering enrollment for May.

Subsequent VA checks will follow each additional month of enrollment. A student whose enrollment ends in June will receive the payment for June on July 1.

The modified advance payment procedure permits advance payment at the beginning of a school term for the first month or partial month, plus the following month only if the student makes a written request and the school agrees to process the advance payment. Prior to this new legislation, all students got advance payments automatically, it was noted.

Students under the GI Bill or the dependents educational assistance program who wish an advance payment should contact their school, because the student's written request for advance payment must be included on the school enrollment certification submitted to VA.

VA emphasized the enrollment certification containing the advance payment request must be received at least 30 days before the start of regular registration. Disabled veterans under VA rehabilitation programs should contact their VA rehabilitation specialist for further information.

Eligible veteran-students requesting advance payment for the fall school session should be aware that no additional check will be forthcoming from the VA for approximately three months, a VA spokesman said.

For example, a veteran receiving an advance payment check in September, covering September and October, would not receive an education payment for November until Dec. 1, because of the elimination of the prepayment provision, it was explained.

Benton bound over in murder hearing

A Cape Girardeau businessman testifying Tuesday in the preliminary hearing of Arthur Dean Benton Jr., who is charged with capital murder in the May 1 slaying of his wife, said Benton came up to him near the shooting scene and said he had shot his wife.

"I asked the guy what happened and he was all excited about it, very excited and frightened," James L. Drury, president of Mid-America Hotels, testified. "He said, 'I just shot my wife,' and I said, 'For God's sake, stop' "

Drury said Benton then agreed to turn himself in and leaned against a nearby car to await the arrival of police.

"He was just real worn out and he said to go call the cops," Drury said.

Drury had been at his office on Mount Auburn Road several hundred yards from the service station where the shooting occurred and was outside with his children when Benton fled the scene on foot.

Benton was bound over to stand trial as charged in Circuit Court by Cape County Magistrate Jerry Estes following the 14 hours of testimony of eyewitnesses, police and the mother of the victim.

A Freeman Mobil Service Center attendant who wrestled the weapon from Benton after one shot had been fired at his wife, Linda Benton, testified that although the couple was arguing Benton appeared calm prior to the shooting.

Norman W. Bradley, Route 3, quoted Benton as telling him: "It's just family dispute; she gets hysterical."

The Bentons were arguing when they and their two children pulled up to a a gasoline pump at the station lot, Bradley said. "They were arguing from the word go," he said. "But when you work in a filling station you hear arguments all the time. I really didn't pay any attention to it."

While Bradley was tending to the car, Mrs. Benton jumped out of the car carrying her infant child and ran into the station. Benton then drove the car away from the pump, tearing the nozzle from the hose, and stopped with the front of the car at the station's main door, he testified.

"The woman was running through them (the bays) and she was hollering for help. 'Don't let him get me, don't let him get me, he'll kill me,' " Bradley stated.

Benton left the car, grabed her arm and put her back in the car. He attempted to drive away but the vehicle went only about four feet and stopped, Bradley testified.

"She evidently pulled the keys out and threw them out," he said.

Bradley said he then observed Benton striking one of the children and at that point he seized Benton and pulled him out of the driver's side of the vehicle and slammed him against the car.

Mrs. Benton, carrying the infant, came to that side of the car, he said.

"After I pushed him up against the car, he said, 'Okay, okay,' " Bradley testified. "His wife was hollering. I turned toward her and he reached over me and knocked her down."

The baby was lying on her chest, close to her face when she fell, he stated.

"When I started to reach over to pick her up, I don't know where he got the gun, I heard a shot," the attendant said.

When asked by defense attorney James A. Cochrane III whether Benton possibly was looking at the rifle to see why it had fired, Bradley said: "When I grabbed the rifle, he ejected the round he had fired. The first think I remember thinking was that he was trying to chamber another round. So, I grabbed the bolt myself."

After wrestling the rifle from him, Bradley said Benton ran north and he fired a shot over Benton's head as he ran around the corner of a building.

He testified that he could see that Mrs. Benton, lying about four feet from the spot where her husband had stood, was bleeding, but "I didn't know how badly she was hurt."

Mrs. Benton was taken by ambulance to St. Francis Medical Center where she underwent surgery. She was transferred to a St. Louis hospital the following week where she died May 9.

The manager of a nearby service station, John M. Powers, of Powers Brothers Standard, testified that he had approached the lot and had picked up and then threw away the discarded car keys before the shooting.

He said that after Bradley had pulled Benton out of the car, Mrs. Benton came around carrying what he believed to be the rifle's clip.

Standing about seven or eight feet from the car on the other side of the gasoline pumps, Powers stated: "She was holding what I presumed was a clip."

He said he looked back toward his station for a moment and when he turned his vision again toward Bradley and Benton, Benton had the rifle. After another glance toward the Standard station, Powers said he heard the shot.

He stated he did not see the defendant fire the shot.

Powers also stated that Benton appeared calm prior to the shooting, as he had spoken to him after the defendant and his wife returned the first time to the car.

Police and an ambulance arrived at the scene moments after Benton fled. While Patrolman Ellen K. Railey tended to the victim, Patrolman Brady Bailey pursued Benton and found him on Mount Auburn Road.

The defendant was not being restrained and did not attempt to flee, Patrolman Bailey said.

The defendant also inquired of the police officer how badly he had injured his wife. "The subject asked me how badly did he hurt her," Patrolman Bailey said.

Also testifying at the hearing, the victim's mother, Mrs. Ruby Sweet, 1210 North Spanish St. said that her daughter had left Benton and moved in with her April 11.

Mrs. Sweet said it was the fourth time the couple had separated in almost four years of marriage.

In one instance after leaving Benton, her daughter had agreed to see Benton at his request and then returned to her home upset. The next morning she left to stay with friends in Scott City, Mrs. Sweet said.

Apparently angered by her departure, Benton told Mrs. Sweet, "If I find her, I'm going to kill her," she said. The defendant also told her that he was not going to allow his wife to divorce him.

At 5 o'clock, Mrs. Sweet telephoned Benton's home and Benton told her his wife was not returning home that night. She said she also spoke to her: "Don't worry, mama, I'll be all right."

Judge Estes rejected a motion by the defense that the charge be reduced to second degree murder. He found that sufficient evidence of premeditation had been introduced.

The defendant will appear in Circuit Court June 20. Bond remains at $50,000.

Housing bill helps big cities

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate, approving a 4.7 billion housing bill for the next three years, wants to make sure America's aging industrial cities receive a boost.

The measure passed Tuesday would permit cities to apply for housing funds under one of three formulas, including one designed to benefit large cities in the East and Midwest.

Both the Senate bill, approved 79-7, and one passed earlier by the House would allow cities to choose between one formula emphasizing low per capita income and one giving priority to older housing.

A third formula in the Senate bill was designed to aid cities of more than 50,000 population with large amounts of pre-1940 housing.

Sen. Harrison A. Williams, D-N.J., said the formula is intended to make federal funds available for urban revitalization of the nation's oldest areas, mostly in the Northeast and Midwest, "that have been hardest hit by economic troubles."

The proposal prompted a regional clash between senators representing "sun belt" states of the South and West and those from the East and Midwest.

The vote to approve the formula was 45-43.

The bill authorizes a three-year extension of the community development block grant program, a merger of former programs such as model cities and urban cenewal. It calls for funding for the program of $4 billion next fiscal year, $4.15 billion for fiscal 1979 and $4.3 billion for fiscal 1980. The authorization for the current fiscal year is $3.25 billion.

The measure, an authorization for the program, does not contain any funding. A separate bill will have to be approved to appropriate funds.

The bill also extends basic federal housing programs for one year to Sept. 30, 1978. It contains an authorization of $1.116 billion to fund new contracts for an estmated 400,000 housing units for low income families through rent supplement and public housing subsidies.

Roundtree, Uggams and Bacall star in Muny Opera

ST. LOUIS— Richard Roundtree, who skyrocketed to fame in the title role of the "Shaft" movies and television series, gifted singer Leslie Uggams and celebrated stage and screen star Lauren Bacall, have been engaged to star in two major misicals at Muny Opera this summer.

Roundtree will portray Sky Masterson and Leslie Uggams will appear as Sarah Brown in Frank Loesser's memorable stage musical "Guys and Dolls", July 18-24. Miss Bacall will star as Ruth in the musical-comedy hit with the Leonard Bernstein score, "Wonderful Town", July 25-31.

The announcement of the two engagements, headlined by the three superstars in award-winning musicals, both featuring vibrant, pulsating and human portraits of the world of "the big apple", brings to nine the number of productions being presented during the Forest Park Theatre's fifty-ninth annual summer season. The closing week beginning August 29 will be occupied by a major musical production to be announced shortly.

In order to present "Guys and Dolls," it was necessary to schedule "Meet Me In St. Louis" as the season's opening production. The schedule follows:

July 4-July 10 Carol Channing in "Hello, Dolly!"

Aug. 1-Aug. 7 Shirley Jones in "The Sound of Music"

Aug.8 Aug. 14 William Conrad and Hans Conried in "Kismet"

Aug. 15-Aug. 21 The Houston Grand Opera production of "Porgy and Bess"

Aug. 22-Aug. 28 Carol Lawrence in "Sweet Charity"

Aug. 29-Sept. 4 To be announced

It was also pointed out that only two weeks remain for the sale of season subscriptions for reserved seats to the ten weeks. Season tickets may be purchased by selecting locations from seat charts at the Forest Park box office, open daily 9 a.m.5 p.m. and Saturdays 9 a.m.-1 p.m.

Richard Roundtree was born in New Rochelle, N.Y. and studied at Southern Illinois University. After working for a time as a model with the Ebony Magazine Fashion Fair, he joined the Negro Ensemble Company Workshop. With this group, he appeared in "Kongi's Harvest," "Man, Better Man," and "Mau Mau Room." Most notably, he played the leading role in a road company of the widely-acclaimed play "The Great White Hope."

His motion picture career began with the overwhelming success of "Shaft" in which he portrayed a hard-driving New York City private detective. More starring roles followed in "Shaft's Big Score," "Shaft in Africa," "Charley One-Eye," "Earthquake," and "Man Friday." On television, Roundtree recreated the role of John Shaft once more for the CBS series and also appeared in "Firehouse," a feature movie made for television.

Leslie Uggams began her singing career when she was only five years old and her television career soon followed with an appearance on Ethel Waters' TV show "Beulah" and with Johnny Olsen's TV Kids at ages 6 and 7. She also performed at Harlem's Apollo Theatre when she was nine, but her "big break" came at age 15 with a $25,000 win on TV's "Name That Tune."

She was soon a guest on numerous radio shows with hosts such as Peter Lind Hayes and Mary Healy, Milton Berle and Arthur Godfrey. This also led to a contract as a soloist with Mitch Miller's TV show "Sing Along With Mitch" which catapulted her to national fame. Television appearances followed with such shows as The Milton Berle Show, Garry Moore Show and Jack Paar. On Broadway, she received rave reviews for her starring role in "Hallelujah Baby." She has also been a headliner in nightclubs around the world.

Based upon some of Damon Runyon's stories and Broadway characters, "Guys and Dolls" tells of the underworld of tinhorn gamblers and sentimental chorus girls of New York's Times Square. The hilarious plot is laced with all-time hit songs "Luck be A Lady Tonight," "I've Never Been In Love Before," "Fugue for Tinhorns," "A Bushel and a Peck," "If I Were A Bell," and "Sit Down, You're Rockin' The Boat."

"Bacall's back and Muny's got her!" In 1971, a combination of talents led by super-star, Lauren Bacall, and authors, Betty Comden and Adolph Green, dazzled Muny audiences when the Broadway company of "Applause" performed. The combination was the right chemistry then as it is now with Miss Bacall starring in the champion musical, "Wonderful Town."

Replete with major dance production numbers, "Wonderful Town" traces the misadventures of two sisters seeking fame and fortune in New York. Destined to give Muny-goers a chance to stand up and cheer again, total-entertainer Lauren Bacall's portrayal in this fast-moving comedy will be enhanced by Bernstein's brilliant score including "Ohio," "Never Felt This Way Before," and "Conga."

Missouri: State Fair announces performers

Helen Reddy

JEFFERSON CITY— The 1977 Missouri State Fair will be held Aug. 19-28 at the Missouri State Fairgrounds in Sedalia, Missouri Director of Agriculture Jack Runyan has announced.

"We're bringing together agriculture's best for this state fair," explained Runyan, "and it's no idle boast that this is going to be the biggest and best state fair Missouri has ever seen."

Helen Reddy will open the Missouri State Fair on Aug. 19, followed by a "Festival of Stars" Aug. 21, with Ronnie Milsap, Tammy Wynette and The Statler Brothers all in concert. Aug. 23 will feature Charlie Pride, while Aug. 24 will be an all Missouri night with Brewer and Shipley and the Ozark Mountain Daredevils. Sedalia's own LeRoy VanDyke will appear Aug. 25, with comedian Jerry Clower. Winding up the grandstand shows Aug. 27 will be recording personalities Waylon Jennings and his wife Jessi Colter.

"We're very happy to have such an outstanding line-up of performers," commented Runyan, "and the cooperation we've received from the artists and their managers leads us to believe that they too are looking forward to appearing at our fair."

In addition to the grandstand shows there will be the usual activities and attractions that make the Missouri State Fair so unique: Quarter horse, Appaloosa and Paint horse races, thoroughbred and pony harness racing, late model and super modified car racing, pony and draft horse pulls and coon dog races.

Helen Reddy

JEFFERSON CITY— The 1977 Missouri State Fair will be held Aug. 19-28 at the Missouri State Fairgrounds in Sedalia, Missouri Director of Agriculture Jack Runyan has announced.

"We're bringing together agriculture's best for this state fair," explained Runyan, "and it's no idle boast that this is going to be the biggest and best state fair Missouri has ever seen."

Helen Reddy will open the Missouri State Fair on Aug. 19, followed by a "Festival of Stars" Aug. 21, with Ronnie Milsap, Tammy Wynette and The Statler Brothers all in concert. Aug. 23 will feature Charlie Pride, while Aug. 24 will be an all Missouri night with Brewer and Shipley and the Ozark Mountain Daredevils. Sedalia's own LeRoy VanDyke will appear Aug. 25, with comedian Jerry Clower. Winding up the grandstand shows Aug. 27 will be recording personalities Waylon Jennings and his wife Jessi Colter.

Each of the above entertainers will perform two shows--at 6 p.m. and 9 p.m.

"We're very happy to have such an outstanding line-up of performers," commented Runyan, "and the cooperation we've received from the artists and their managers leads us to believe that they too are looking forward to appearing at our fair."

In addition to the grandstand shows there will be the usual activities and attractions that make the Missouri State Fair so unique: Quarter horse, Appaloosa and Paint horse races, thoroughbred and pony harness racing, late model and super modified car racing, pony and draft horse pulls and coon dog races.

In 1942 the six-store chain serving four states was bought by a partnership made up primarily of store managers who renamed it Owners Service Company from which Osco was coined. The low price/high quality merchandising philosophy coupled with autonomous management has proven successful for Osco which currently operates 256 stores in 18 states, and still growing.

Prince Valiant

by HAL FOSTER

Our Story: GUNTHER EXPECTED TO BE CRIPPLED FOR LIFE, BUT SUCH IS THE SKILL OF THE INFIDEL PHYSICIANS AND THE NURSING OF ZARA THAT WITHIN A MONTH HE FEELS STRONG ENOUGH TO WEAR HIS ARMOR.

SLOWLY HE MAKES HIS WAY TO THE CHURCH OF THE HOLY SEPULCHRE, THERE TO ONCE MORE CONSECRATE HIS SWORD TO THE FULFILLMENT OF HIS QUEST.

TO AN ELDER ON DUTY HE COMPLAINS: "THIS CHURCH IS SACRED TO ALL CHRISTIANS, SEE TO IT THAT NO INFIDEL SETS FOOT IN IT."

HE IS AN IMPATIENT YOUTH. TO HIS HOST, THE SHEIK ABDUL EL MOHAMMED, HE DEMANDS: "SIR VALIANT KNOWS WHERE THE CHURCH ROBBERS RESIDE. WITH A FEW OF YOUR ARMED RETAINERS, I CAN RETRIEVE THE SACRED RELICS."

"PRINCE VALIANT, I SEE TROUBLED TIMES AHEAD AND MUST MOVE MY HOUSEHOLD TO MY SHEIKDOM AT THE OASIS OF ARTAS. HEBREW AND ARAB HAVE LIVED TOGETHER IN PEACE FOR MANY YEARS, BUT YOUR FRIEND GUNTHER'S WORDS AWAKEN OLD ENMITIES."

ONCE THIS WAS CALLED 'THE LAND OF MILK AND HONEY," BUT THE TRAMPING FEET OF ARMIES HAVE LEFT LITTLE BUT RUINS AND DESERT.

HELP FOR HOMEMAKERS

DEAR HELOISE:

I could never manage that cool sophisticated look that some ladies carry off so well with their shoulder bags.

Mine gave me more action than a 3-month-old baby.

I was starting to walk lopsided which also caused the length of my dress to be completely out of fashion all the way around. Too short on one side and too long on the other.

Not only that, there were always tacky-looking long loose threads hanging down my back that kept wearing out in the strap from the constant slipping, sliding.

The sponge keeps the strap from slipping no matter what material you wear. The sponge is also like a padding and relieves the pressure of a heavy bag, and it can't be seen.

Now my shoulder bag is a joy and my lopsided walk is gone. I'm afraid it's turned into a proud strut.

There are no words to tell you how much I enjoy and appreciate your column. So I'll just close with these words — Thank you for being there.

Roberta Ward

Now I can strut with pride because of your kind words. Please strut into our corner any time!

Bless you for writing.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY!

DEAR HELOISE:

Instead of placing a bow on my birthday present (which is always flattened in the mail), my aunt made a bow from a paper lace doily and then pasted it on the package.

I thought it so clever and pretty too.

DEAR HELOISE:

To keep children happy, take an ink pad and the fancy tops of bottles and let them dip the top in ink and stamp on paper.

They will have lots of fun doing it.

MANICOTTI, ANYONE?

DEAR HELOISE:

For those people who love manicotti but don't like spooning the cheese into the shell, I have a faster and easier way to do it.

Put the cheese mixture into a cookie or frosting press and squeeze it in. It works great.

S. Frank

+++

You sure are a smart cookie. I have always struggled with trying to fill those shells. Now you have taught me one.

Heloise II

HERE COMES COOKIE!

DEAR HELOISE:

Here's a suggestion that works just great for me. I hate to mix up a batch of cookies, bake them and then clean up the kitchen.

Now I mix the cookies the day before, put them in the refrigerator and clean up the kitchen. The next morning when my kitchen is all nice and clean I just bake the cookies. No fuss or bother and I'm in a mood to enjoy the cookies too.

L.C.

A WEIGH-OUT IDEA

DEAR HELOISE:

I enjoy outdoor gardening so when I want to move something heavy I use my children's old coasting disk.

I can slide anything onto it and then pull it over the ground. It will not disturb the grass and it slides along easily when pulled.

E.B.M.

LETTER OF LAUGHTER

DEAR HELOISE:

Instead of tying a string to my finger to remember, I use a twistem.

R. Hall

PINS 'N' NEEDLES

DEAR HELOISE:

I find a good magnet invaluable in the sewing room.

My magnet is taped to a yardstick and I run it over the carpet before I vacuum and it picks up all the tacks, staples, pins and needles that land on the floor.

Ivy Ficker

THE COLD FACTS

DEAR HELOISE:

I like the convenience and ease of making refrigerator cookies but mine were sometimes a little lopsided when ready to bake.

One day I made the cookie rolls as usual, wrapped them in the liner of a potato chip canister and then into the can to chill.

Save the plastic lids of the canister and place them on both ends of the tube before placing in the refrigerator. This will keep the cookie mixture from drying out until baking time.

ICE CREAM TRICK

DEAR HELOISE:

Mrs. Charles Buta

CAN YOU TRUST YOUR EYES? There are at least six differences in drawing details between top and bottom panels. How quickly can you find them? Check answers with those below.

Differences: 1. Golf club is missing. 2. Tee mat is missing. 3. Marker pole is shorter. 4. Direction sign is missing. 5. Number is missing from shirt. 6. Arm is repositioned.

Hal Kaufman's JUNIOR WHIRL®

THIS STUNT looks easy, but not everyone can do it. Place a rubber eraser or similar object at the edge of a counter or table top. Place your hand on the table. Bend your middle finger and pinky backwards.

Now, with index and third fingers extended forward, slowly slide your hand along the surface. Reach down with the index and third fingers, and pick up the eraser. Holding it thusly, ease it off the table edge (see inset at top).

Aha! Easy, you insist. Okay, now try it with a wider object, and next—with your other hand.

BULLETIN BOARD
